

LEGISLATING LANGUAGE USE IN ALBERTA:
A CENTURY OF INCIDENTAL PROVISIONS FOR A FUNDAMENTAL MATTER

EDMUND A. AUNGER*

Language law deals with a matter of fundamental importance, and language rights have been widely recognized as fundamental human rights. Yet very little is known about Alberta's legislative provisions for language use. This article examines those provisions that have had the greatest impact over the past century and places them in their historical context. It also presents a comprehensive overview of the many unheralded provisions and organizes them according to their thematic significance. During Alberta's early decades these language provisions commonly imposed English and repressed minority languages. In more recent years they have promoted a greater tolerance for French and other languages.

Le droit linguistique a trait à une matière d'importance fondamentale, et les droits linguistiques sont généralement reconnus comme des droits fondamentaux. Pourtant, en ce qui concerne l'Alberta, les dispositions législatives en matière de langue sont largement ignorées. Cet article étudie les dispositions qui ont eu le plus grand impact depuis un siècle et les situe dans leur contexte historique. Il présente également un survol étendu des nombreuses dispositions inconnues et les organise selon leur importance thématique. Au cours de ses premières décennies l'Alberta a adopté des dispositions qui ont imposé l'anglais et réprimé les langues minoritaires. Plus récemment, toutefois, ces dispositions font preuve d'une plus grande tolérance pour la langue française et pour d'autres langues.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

I.	INTRODUCTION	464
II.	HISTORICAL ANALYSIS OF THE PRINCIPAL LANGUAGE PROVISIONS	468
	A. SECTION 110 OF THE NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES ACT , 1905-1988	468
	B. THE SCHOOL ACT , 1905 TO PRESENT	473
	C. SECTION 27 OF THE INTERPRETATION ACT , 1919-1980	479
	D. THE LANGUAGES ACT , 1988 TO PRESENT	482
III.	THEMATIC OVERVIEW OF INCIDENTAL LANGUAGE PROVISIONS	484
	A. THE OFFICIAL LANGUAGES OF ALBERTA	484
	B. FUNDAMENTAL LANGUAGE RIGHTS	485
	C. THE LANGUAGE OF THE LEGISLATURE AND THE COURTS	485
	D. THE LANGUAGE OF THE CIVIL ADMINISTRATION	488
	E. THE LANGUAGE OF SEMI-PUBLIC AGENCIES	490
	F. THE LANGUAGE OF LABOUR RELATIONS	492
	G. THE LANGUAGE OF COMMERCE AND BUSINESS	493
	H. THE LANGUAGE OF INSTRUCTION	496
IV.	CONCLUSION	497

* Professor of Political Science, Faculté Saint-Jean, University of Alberta. The author gratefully acknowledges the research assistance provided by Katharine McDonough who, in 1992, diligently sifted through several hundred statutes in search of legislative provisions relevant to language use.

I. INTRODUCTION

Legislative provisions that relate to language use deal with a matter of fundamental importance. As the Supreme Court of Canada in 1988 declared in Ford v. Quebec (A.G.), “[l]anguage is not merely a means or medium of expression; it colours the content and meaning of expression. It is a means by which a people may express its cultural identity. It is also the means by which one expresses one’s personal identity and sense of individuality.”¹ In support, the Court cited the internationally-renowned sociolinguist, Joshua Fishman:

[L]anguage is not merely a means of interpersonal communication and influence. It is not merely a carrier of content, whether latent or manifest. Language itself is content, a reference for loyalties and animosities, an indicator of social statuses and personal relationships, a marker of situations and topics as well as of the societal goals and the large-scale value-laden arenas of interaction that typify every speech community.²

For this reason, the Supreme Court has treated language rights as fundamental human rights. In the Manitoba Language Rights Reference, it offered a now classic affirmation:

The importance of language rights is grounded in the essential role that language plays in human existence, development and dignity. It is through language that we are able to form concepts; to structure and order the world around us. Language bridges the gap between isolation and community, allowing humans to delineate the rights and duties they hold in respect of one another, and thus to live in society.³

Fundamental importance notwithstanding, relatively little is known about Alberta’s legislative provisions for language use. Claude-Armand Sheppard, writing in 1965, described Canadian language law as a “relatively unexplored field” and his own pioneering study, The Law of Languages in Canada, as “no more than a preliminary survey of an extremely complex and important field of law.”⁴ Alberta fared particularly poorly, rating only occasional paragraphs on a dozen pages scattered throughout his 414-page text.⁵ Sheppard cited six statutes, containing eight language provisions,⁶ all located in the Revised Statutes of Alberta 1955: the City Act,⁷ the Coal Mines Regulation Act,⁸ the Companies Act,⁹ the Interpretation Act,¹⁰ the Municipal Districts Act,¹¹ and the School Act.¹² After examining each of these, he concluded that “the only language which enjoys official status in Alberta is English.”¹³

¹ Ford v. Quebec (A.G.), [1988] 2 S.C.R. 712 at 748-49.

² Joshua A. Fishman, The Sociology of Language: An Interdisciplinary Social Approach to Language in Society (Rowley, Massachusetts: Newbury House Publishers, 1972) at 4.

³ Reference Re Manitoba Language Rights, [1985] 1 S.C.R. 721 at 744.

⁴ Claude-Armand Sheppard, The Law of Languages in Canada (Ottawa: Information Canada, 1971) at xviii.

⁵ Ibid. at 87-91, 170, 242, 251, 253-54, 260, 297-98.

⁶ Ibid. at 298.

⁷ R.S.A. 1955, c. 42, s. 96(1).

⁸ R.S.A. 1955, c. 47, ss. 72(c), 73(b).

⁹ R.S.A. 1955, c. 53, s. 130(3).

¹⁰ R.S.A. 1955, c. 160, s. 40.

¹¹ R.S.A. 1955, c. 215, s. 85.

¹² R.S.A. 1955, c. 297, ss. 385, 386(1).

¹³ Sheppard, supra note 4 at 298.

Since that time, numerous works have appeared on Canada and selected provinces,¹⁴ but few have shed much further light on Alberta. In one, a province-by-province study of legislative provisions for minority-language education, Pierre Foucher evaluated each province in the light of constitutional guarantees recently entrenched in s. 23 of the Constitution Act, 1982.¹⁵ He foresightedly judged the Alberta School Act unconstitutional because of its failure to provide for French-language minority schools.¹⁶ In another work, enticingly entitled "Official Bilingualism in Alberta," but limited largely to pre-1905 events, historian Kenneth Munro confirmed that "the study of the question of language in Alberta had largely been neglected."¹⁷ In 1989, Edmund Aunger published an historical overview of provincial language law, but focused mainly on the legislature, courts and schools.¹⁸ This study raised more questions than it answered.

The failure to examine Alberta's language law more extensively may be due to a widespread suspicion that there is nothing much to be studied. Sheppard himself posited that a legislature's power to regulate language use might, in some instances, be exercised only occasionally. "It will tend to be unnecessary in linguistically homogeneous jurisdictions or in areas where, by custom or practice, a single language is used."¹⁹ At first glance this would seem to apply directly to Alberta. According to the 2001 census the English language is overwhelmingly dominant: 82 percent claim English as their mother tongue, 96 percent speak English in their home and 99 percent are able to converse in English. Nevertheless, such homogeneity may be a new phenomenon. In 1916, for example, only 67 percent of Albertans spoke English as their mother tongue.²⁰

Provincial ideology might also work against the adoption of such legislation. Alberta's political leaders have been frequent and vocal opponents of government intervention in various social and economic questions, including language matters, arguing that it would unjustly restrain personal liberty and individual choice.²¹ In 1992, for example, Alberta's

¹⁴ For Canada, see generally Réjean M. Patry, La législation linguistique fédérale (Quebec: Éditeur officiel du Québec, 1981); M. Bastarache, ed., Les droits linguistiques au Canada (Montreal: Yvon Blais, 1986), published in English as Language Rights in Canada (Montreal: Yvon Blais, 1989); Joseph E. Magnet, Official Languages of Canada (Montreal: Yvon Blais, 1995); C. Michael MacMillan, The Practice of Language Rights in Canada (Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1998). For various provinces, see also Jean-Claude Gémard, Les trois états de la politique linguistique du Québec (Quebec: Éditeur officiel du Québec, 1983); Gérard Snow, Les droits linguistiques des Acadiens du Nouveau Brunswick (Quebec: Éditeur officiel du Québec, 1981); J.L. Gilles LeVasseur, Le statut juridique du français en Ontario (Ottawa: Presses de l'Université d'Ottawa, 1993); Jacqueline Blay, L'Article 23 : Les péripéties législatives et juridiques du fait français au Manitoba, 1870-1986 (Saint-Boniface, Manitoba: Éditions du Blé, 1987).

¹⁵ Pierre Foucher, Constitutional Language Rights of Official-Language Minorities in Canada (Ottawa: Canadian Law Information Council, 1985); Constitution Act, 1982, being Schedule B to the Canada Act 1982 (U.K.), 1982, c. 11.

¹⁶ Foucher, ibid. at 271-72.

¹⁷ Kenneth Munro, "Official Bilingualism in Alberta" (1987) 12:1 Prairie Forum 37 at 37.

¹⁸ Edmund A. Aunger, "Language and Law in the Province of Alberta" in P. Pupier & J. Woehrling, eds., Language and Law (Montreal: Wilson & Lafleur, 1989) 203.

¹⁹ Supra note 4 at 101.

²⁰ Canada, Census and Statistics Office, Census of Prairie Provinces: Population and Agriculture, 1916 (Ottawa: Printer to the King, 1918) at 250.

²¹ C.B. Macpherson, in his classic study of Alberta's political system first published in 1953, was among the first to draw attention to the province's radical individualism, often manifested in a profound opposition to government intervention and bureaucratic regulation. See C.B. Macpherson, Democracy

Premier, Don Getty, called for the repeal of federal language provisions, asserting that “bilingualism should be removed from the force of law. This would be a fundamental change in Canada. Bilingualism by choice not by law.”²² Four days later a published poll revealed that 63 percent of the Alberta population supported Getty’s proposal that “bilingualism should not be an official policy with the force of government behind it.”²³ As Doug Main, Alberta’s Minister of Culture and Multiculturalism, explained, “Albertans, and many Canadians, don’t like being told what to do.”²⁴

The incidental or ancillary nature of language in Canadian constitutional law provides an additional disincentive to study Alberta’s language provisions. Language is not listed among the various legislative powers attributed by the Constitution Act, 1867 to the Canadian Parliament or to the provincial legislatures.²⁵ It is incidental to these powers. As Peter Hogg explains, “for constitutional purposes language is ancillary to the purpose for which it is used, and a language law is for constitutional purposes a law in relation to the institutions or activities to which the law applies.”²⁶ In practical terms this means that language provisions have nearly always been buried in statutes dealing with other matters. Further, since these provisions are rarely indexed, researchers have, until recently, faced the daunting task of manually sifting through thousands of legislative acts. (Between 1906 and 1990, for example, the Alberta legislature adopted some 7,380 statutes.)

Fortunately, in 2001, the Alberta Heritage Digitization Project (AHDP) effectively removed this obstacle when it provided on-line access to retrospective Alberta statutes from 1906 to 1990, and to Alberta bills from 1950 to 1990.²⁷ This database reveals that, contrary to popular perception, the provincial government has legislated extensively on language questions. Between 1906 and 1980, for example, 112 statutes, or in other words, almost 2 percent of those adopted, made incidental provision for language use.²⁸ Some contained generic provisions applicable to any language, including 33 that condemned the use of insulting, profane, blasphemous, offensive, abusive, indecent or obscene language — an interesting commentary on contemporary social concerns. However, 62 statutes, or 1 percent, regulated the use of a specified language, most commonly English but sometimes French. Typically, the legislators recognized the English language for use in provincial elections, in Alberta: The Theory and Practice of a Quasi-party System (Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1953). For more recent works on this theme, see Trevor Harrison & Gordon Laxer, eds., The Trojan Horse: Alberta and the Future of Canada (Montreal: Black Rose Books, 1995) and Mark Lisac, The Klein Revolution (Edmonton: NeWest Press, 1995). For a specific commentary on the relevance of Alberta’s neo-liberalism to language law, see Edmund A. Aunger, “De la répression à la tolérance: les contrariétés du néolibéralisme linguistique en Alberta” in J.-P. Wallot, ed., La gouvernance linguistique: le Canada en perspective (Ottawa: Centre de recherche en civilisation canadienne-française, forthcoming).

²² “Excerpts from Premier’s Speech on the Constitution” The Edmonton Journal (10 January 1992) A7.

²³ “Getty’s remarks harmful—poll” The Edmonton Journal (18 January 1992) A3.

²⁴ “Doug Main fights for his Premier” The Edmonton Journal (26 January 1992) D1.

²⁵ Constitution Act, 1867 (U.K.), 30 & 31 Vict., c. 3, ss. 91, 92, reprinted in R.S.C. 1985, App. II, No. 5.

²⁶ Peter W. Hogg, Constitutional Law of Canada, 2d ed. (Toronto: Carswell, 1985) at 805.

²⁷ “Retrospective Law Collection,” online: Our Future, Our Past: The Alberta Heritage Digitization Project <www.ourfutureourpast.ca/law/>.

²⁸ We counted only those statutes that contained either the word “language” or a direct reference to a specific language, such as “English” or “French.” We did not count the numerous indirect references to language, implied in such words as “read,” “write,” “speak,” “publish” or “interpret.”

professional services, municipal government, public records, judicial process, school instruction, industrial relations or consumer and corporate affairs. Their goal was often to ban minority languages, rather than to protect free speech or guarantee individual choice.

In recent years the provincial legislature has intervened even more extensively. The Revised Statutes of Alberta 2000 include 34 statutes that provide for language use, or about 8 percent of the total. (When subordinate legislation is considered this number increases to 61 statutes, or 14 percent.) Again, many provisions are generic but in contrast to earlier times they are likely to protect individual rights in any language, rather than to impose prohibitions — only four statutes now regulate abusive or obscene language. There are also 19 statutes (or more than 4 percent) that contain provisions referring to a specific language. Although these still favour English, many also provide for the use of two or more languages. Current language provisions relate, for example, to the naming of business corporations, the appointment of interpreters at polling places, the proficiency of health professionals, the records of municipal councils, the languages of school instruction, the selection of jury panels, the examination of witnesses and the proving of wills. Further, there is now a statute, the Languages Act, that provides exclusively for language use, specifically in the provincial legislature and courts.²⁹

This article will examine Alberta's record in legislating language use and situate it in historical and thematic context. First it will study, in detail, the province's most important language provisions, which are found at various times in four different statutes: the North-West Territories Act, the School Act, the Interpretation Act and the Languages Act. The first two were not originally enacted by the provincial legislature but were carried over from the North-West Territories. The provincial constitution, the Alberta Act, provided in 1905 that "[a]ll laws and all orders and regulations" in vigour at that date in the Territories, would continue in the new province of Alberta until such time as the provincial legislature (or the federal Parliament, as appropriate) decided otherwise.³⁰ The Canadian Minister of Justice, Charles Fitzpatrick, explained that "we are perpetuating the rights, whatever they may be, in the North-West Territories with respect to language, leaving it to the legislature to determine hereafter to what extent these rights may be maintained."³¹

Second, this article will present a thematic overview of the province's language provisions, modeled on a modern provincial charter, Quebec's Charter of the French Language.³² In this overview, the major themes will be official languages, fundamental language rights, the language of the legislature and the courts, the language of the civil administration, the language of semi-public agencies, the language of labour relations, the language of commerce and business and the language of instruction. Although no direct comparisons are made, it is evident that Alberta's disparate and little-known language legislation, like Quebec's

²⁹ Languages Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. L-6.

³⁰ Alberta Act, S.C. 1905, c. 3, s. 16, reprinted in R.S.C. 1970, App. II, No. 19. One of the new government's first priorities, then, was to consolidate the existing laws. See Alberta, Department of the Attorney General, The Ordinances of the North-West Territories, Being an official consolidation of the Ordinances of the North-West Territories in force on August 31st, 1905 (Edmonton: J.E. Richards, 1907).

³¹ House of Commons Debates (30 June 1905) at 8634.

³² R.S.Q., c. C-11.

codified and well publicized language charter, has been strikingly comprehensive and far-reaching.

II. HISTORICAL ANALYSIS OF THE PRINCIPAL LANGUAGE PROVISIONS

A. SECTION 110 OF THE NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES ACT, 1905-1988

In 1905 s. 110 of the North-West Territories Act, as amended in 1891, continued to operate in the newly created province of Alberta. It thereby established English and French as the official languages of Alberta's legislature and courts:

Either the English or the French language may be used by any person in the debates of the Legislative Assembly of the Territories and in the proceedings before the courts; and both those languages shall be used in the records and journals of such Assembly; and all ordinances made under this Act shall be printed in both those languages: Provided, however, that after the next general election of the Legislative Assembly, such Assembly may, by ordinance or otherwise, regulate its proceedings, and the manner of recording and publishing the same; and the regulations so made shall be embodied in a proclamation which shall be forthwith made and published by the Lieutenant Governor in conformity with the law, and thereafter shall have full force and effect.³³

The Canadian Parliament had originally adopted the first part of this provision in 1877 at a time when French-speakers made up some three-quarters of the North-West's non-indigenous population.³⁴ Less than a decade later, however, the French had been reduced to a small minority by the flood of English-speaking immigrants from Ontario. Consequently, in 1889, the North-West Assembly—now entirely English—resolved to petition the federal government for abolition of the “dual language” provision. Parliament refused this petition but, in 1891, as a minor concession, added a new clause to s. 110, permitting the Assembly to determine the language of its proceedings. This the Assembly did on 19 January 1892 by adopting a resolution moved by the head of the executive committee, Frederick Haultain: “That it is desirable that the proceedings of the Legislative Assembly shall be recorded and published hereafter in the English language only.”³⁵ The Lieutenant Governor had already contracted for the French-language publication of the Legislature's 1890 proceedings and these duly appeared in 1892.³⁶ However, these were the last Journals to be printed in French.

Not content with this small victory, Haultain and his government proceeded over the next two years to surreptitiously strip the French language of all official status. Disregarding the constitutional obligations, the executive terminated the French-language printings of ³³ North-West Territories Act, R.S.C. 1886, c. 50, s. 110 as am. by S.C. 1891, c. 22, s. 18.

³⁴ Edmund A. Aunger, “The Mystery of the French Language Ordinances: An Investigation into Official Bilingualism and the Canadian North-West—1870 to 1895” (1998) 13 C.J.L.S. 89 at 99 [Aunger, “French Language Ordinances”].

³⁵ Legislative Assembly, Journals of the Second Legislative Assembly of the North-West Territories, Session 1891-92 (Regina, NWT: R.B. Gordon, 1892) at 110.

³⁶ Aunger, “French Language Ordinances,” supra note 34 at 120.

departmental reports and regulations in 1893 and of ordinances and gazettes in 1895.³⁷ As a result, in practice if not in law, English became the sole official language in the North-West Territories and then later in the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. Subsequent legislators and jurists, often recent immigrants to Western Canada and blissfully ignorant of the region's legal history, blindly conformed to the new English-only regime. If they occasionally permitted the use of French, they perceived this to be a temporary privilege rather than a legal right.

For example, although the Alberta Legislative Assembly commonly published its statutes and regulations exclusively in English, Alberta's first French-speaking cabinet minister, Prosper Edmond Lessard, proudly announced in 1909 that the government had translated all its statutes into the French language.³⁸ Two years later he backtracked somewhat claiming simply that the most useful laws were available in French, "telles que celles concernant les Battages, les clôtures, les animaux errants, les Sociétés d'Agriculture, les Privilèges d'ouvriers, les mauvaises herbes, la fabrication du beurre et du Fromage, les feux de prairie, les Mines de charbon, les mariages, et décès, etc."³⁹ Nevertheless, Lessard's newspaper, Le Courrier de l'Ouest, warned its readers that, in spite of numerous requests, the government was still not convinced that there was a real demand.⁴⁰ In subsequent years the newspaper decided to reprint some statutes in its own pages.⁴¹

Similarly, Alberta's courts functioned almost exclusively in the English language. In 1924, however, the Edmonton Bulletin reported a newsworthy exception where the litigants, their legal counsel and the judge, Lucien Dubuc, had all spoken French:

For perhaps the first time in the history of the Province of Alberta, court proceedings were conducted entirely in the French language, with Judge Dubuc presiding, during the trial of a small debt case. Usually when French or languages other than English is spoken, the evidence is translated by the interpreter into English, and all the arguments are in English. At the conclusion of this case, both lawyers congratulated the Court upon his presiding over proceedings so unique in Alberta.⁴²

In fact, these French-language proceedings may not have been so unique. In 1921, for example, an English-speaking police constable, reporting on a criminal case previously heard in St. Paul, revealed, "I should here state that by consent of the Justice, all the evidence was taken in the French language and Mr. LaRue acting as clerk interpreted the evidence and wrote same in the English language, consequently I was unable to follow the case to any extent; Mr. A.U. Lebel acting on behalf of the complainant."⁴³

³⁷ Edmund A. Auger, "Justifying the End of Official Bilingualism: Canada's North-West Assembly and the Dual Language Question, 1889-1892" (2001) 34 Can. J. Pol. Sc. 451 at 466.

³⁸ "Le problème français de l'Ouest" Le Courrier de l'Ouest [Edmonton] (17 June 1909) 4.

³⁹ P.E. Lessard, Editor of Le Courrier de l'Ouest, to A. Turgeon, Attorney General of Saskatchewan (29 September 1911) Saskatchewan Archives Board, File M3-17K.

⁴⁰ "Les ordonnances en français" Le Courrier de l'Ouest [Edmonton] (19 October 1911) 1.

⁴¹ See for example "Acte des liqueurs" Le Courrier de l'Ouest (20 May 1915) 6.

⁴² "French is used exclusively in court here for first time" Edmonton Bulletin (7 May 1924) 2.

⁴³ Constable H. Allen, Alberta Provincial Police, Crime Report: Rex v. Routhier (1921), Criminal Case Files of the Department of the Attorney General, Alberta Provincial Archives, File 72.26. It is now very difficult to verify the frequency of such occurrences, since the court records for most judicial districts in Alberta have been destroyed. In any case, these records were invariably written in English, with no

The normal practice was, unquestionably, to refuse the use of French. In 1931, Taylor J. of Saskatchewan's Court of King's Bench affirmed that he himself had always directed "that all proceedings be had and taken in English."⁴⁴ Further, "[s]ince the establishment of the Supreme Court of the North-West Territories no practice permitting the use of French in the Courts seems to have been countenanced."⁴⁵ He also claimed, by way of explanation, that the North-West Territories Act, and s. 110 in particular, had been expressly "repealed by the Parliament of Canada in 1906."⁴⁶ Evidently, Taylor was not aware that Parliament had quickly corrected this error by adding the qualifying phrase "except as regards the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta."⁴⁷

In addition, Taylor contended that Saskatchewan's disestablishment of the North-West courts had superceded s. 110.⁴⁸ He also claimed that provincial statutes and regulations, such as the Judicature Ordinance and the Rules of Court, recognizing English as the language of practice and procedure, now stood "as expressing the legislative will of to-day."⁴⁹ A half century later, Greschuk J. of Alberta's Court of Queen's Bench adopted this same line of reasoning in the Lefebvre case.⁵⁰ He expressed the opinion that "once the province abolished or replaced the courts of the Territories and established or constituted their own provincial courts, s. 110 became inapplicable to the new provincial courts."⁵¹ Further, since Alberta's *Interpretation Act*⁵² had declared English to be the language of public records including, necessarily, the written proceedings of a provincial court, Greschuk concluded that "if s. 110 continued in force in Alberta after the courts of the Northwest Territories ceased to exist, it was repealed by implication, operation of law or unavoidable interference."⁵³

In the 1985 Paquette case, however, Sinclair J. lucidly rebutted these arguments.⁵⁴ He noted, tactfully, that neither Taylor J. nor Greschuk J. were apparently aware that s. 110 had been revived in 1907 with respect to Alberta and Saskatchewan.⁵⁵ Since that time, it had never been repealed, either expressly or by implication. (Moreover, since the Paquette case concerned criminal procedure, such repeal was not within the competence of the provincial government.) "Accordingly, s. 110 gives an accused and his counsel the right to use the French language for all purposes during the preliminary hearing and trial."⁵⁶ Justice Sinclair indication of the language actually spoken.

⁴⁴ G.E. Taylor, "The Official Language of the Courts in Saskatchewan" (1931) 9 Can. Bar Rev. 277 at 277.

⁴⁵ Ibid. at 283.

⁴⁶ Supra note 44 at 280. He was apparently referring here to Schedule A of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906. See North-West Territories Act, R.S.C. 1886, c. 50, as rep. by 1906, c. 43, s. 4 (Schedule A).

⁴⁷ Act to amend Schedule A to the Revised Statutes 1906, S.C. 1907, c. 44, s. 1(c).

⁴⁸ Supra note 44 at 281-82.

⁴⁹ Ibid. at 282.

⁵⁰ R. v. Lefebvre (1982), 69 C.C.C. (2d) 448 (Alta. Q.B.) [Lefebvre] reprinted in Jules Deschênes, Ainsi parlèrent les tribunaux..., vol. 2, Conflits linguistiques au Canada, 1968-1985 (Montreal: Wilson & Lafleur) 661. All pinpoint references are to the Deschênes reprint.

⁵¹ Deschênes, ibid. at 669.

⁵² R.S.A. 1922, c. 1, s. 35.

⁵³ Supra note 50 at 674.

⁵⁴ Paquette v. R. in Right of Canada (1985), 40 Alta. L.R. (2d) 38 (Q.B.) [Paquette (1985)].

⁵⁵ Ibid. at 43-45.

⁵⁶ Ibid. at 39.

further concluded that the judges involved “must be able to comprehend the French and the English languages in both their spoken and written forms.”⁵⁷ Two years later the Court of Appeal agreed that “[s]ection 110 of the North-West Territories Act does apply in Alberta,” thereby upholding the right to use the French language in provincial courts.⁵⁸ On the other hand, it also determined that this did not include the right to a judge who understood the language. Nevertheless, by this time Alberta’s judiciary had already conducted 21 trials in the French language, including two jury trials.⁵⁹

Language use in Alberta’s Legislative Assembly experienced similar vicissitudes. English was widely deemed to be the sole official language and in 1971 Claude-Armand Sheppard concluded that “English has been the only language ever used in the legislature or in any of its committees.”⁶⁰ In fact, French had been spoken on various occasions, but its use was considered a privilege to be reluctantly granted or rudely denied. Documenting this use is difficult, however, since there was no published Hansard prior to 1971, and newspaper reports are often the only available source.

In 1936 La Survivance reported that J. William Beaudry, the Member of the Legislative Assembly (MLA) for St. Paul and a member of the governing Social Credit party, had delivered parts of his maiden speech in French.⁶¹ His remarks, including praise for the contribution of the province’s French-speaking pioneers, were warmly received: “De chaleureux applaudissements ont vivement souligné ses paroles.” On the other hand the Edmonton Journal noted in 1952 that Liberal leader J. Harper Prowse’s intervention, opposing the planned elimination of “foreign” languages taught in grade 10, had met with a more frosty response.⁶² He had spoken briefly “in what the house assumed was French” to illustrate that the French tongue was not widely understood or appreciated; but a government backbencher, rising on a point of order, questioned “whether members were allowed to speak French in the legislature.”⁶³ A decade later a new Liberal opposition leader, Michael Maccagno, commenting in French on Canadian bilingualism, endured more blatant bigotry. A government member allegedly demanded: “Mr. Speaker, have the honourable member from Lac La Biche speak white.”⁶⁴ The Speaker permitted Maccagno to continue, but requested an oral translation. By contrast, in 1975, Sacred backbencher Charles Drain playfully enlivened question period by asking Premier Peter Lougheed, in French, why he had spoken only one of Canada’s two official languages at the opening of the Canada Winter Games in Lethbridge.⁶⁵ The unilingual Lougheed deftly handed the question off to the Government House Leader, Louis Hyndman, who replied in French.

⁵⁷ Ibid. at 69 [emphasis in original].

⁵⁸ R. v. Paquette (1987), 55 Alta. L.R. (2d) 1 (C.A.) [Paquette (1987)].

⁵⁹ Alberta, Government, Alberta’s Language Policy (22 June 1988) at 7.

⁶⁰ Supra note 4 at 297.

⁶¹ “Premier discours du député de St-Paul à la Législature” La Survivance [Edmonton] (26 February 1936) 3.

⁶² “Language Courses Questioned As Education Budget Studied” The Edmonton Journal (20 March 1952) 1.

⁶³ Ibid.

⁶⁴ M. Maccagno, “Excerpt from unpublished memoirs.” See Alberta, Legislative Assembly, Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing, Minutes (22 June 1987) exhibit 12.

⁶⁵ Legislative Assembly, Alberta Hansard, 15 (12 February 1975) at 588 (Mr. Drain).

In 1986, however, an MLA claimed that the use of French was a legal right and in support cited s. 110 of the North-West Territories Act.⁶⁶ Leo Piquette, the newly-elected New Democrats (ND) member for Athabasca-Lac La Biche, proudly announced that “j’ai choisi ce moment historique pour indiquer fortement que comme un député dans l’Assemblée législative de l’Alberta, j’assume mes droits selon l’article 110 des statuts de Northwest Territories Act de 1891.”⁶⁷ His comments were greeted with silence, but no evident opposition. Nevertheless, almost a year later, when he again spoke in French, this time during question period, his words sparked a bizarre political crisis.⁶⁸ “Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Minister of Education, le ministre de l’éducation. Mr. Speaker, these questions are pertaining to section 23 of the Constitution Act signed by this province on April 19, 1982. Les franco-Albertains attendent impatiemment depuis 1982.”⁶⁹ At this point the Speaker intervened, called Piquette to order and commanded: “En anglais, s’il vous plaît.... The Chair directs that the questions will be in English or the member will forfeit the position.” Piquette immediately contested the Speaker’s decision, claiming that “the language rights guaranteed in Section 110 of the North West Territories Act were never extinguished and do still obtain in the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Alberta.”⁷⁰

Government members were incredulous, refusing to believe that this statute, previously unknown to them, could still have any contemporary relevance. Nevertheless, they sent the question to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections for further study. There the parliamentary counsel, Michael Ritter, further compounded the confusion, erroneously proclaiming that the statute was indeed irrelevant and rudely disparaged expert testimony to the contrary. He asserted that the Alberta Legislative Assembly was completely sovereign and supreme in its powers, unfettered either by law or by courts, and thus “the assumption of parliamentary independence and the right to regulate one’s own Chamber prevails.”⁷¹ Moreover, he advised the members that convention could extinguish statute and that in Alberta the convention was “basically one of a unilingual Legislature.”⁷² The committee accepted these arguments and decided, on a motion from the Deputy Premier, David Russell, that Leo Piquette had breached the privileges of all members of the Assembly “by his failure to uphold the absolute authority of the Speaker to rule on points of order and to accept such rulings without debate or appeal.”⁷³ It recommended, therefore, that he “unconditionally apologize to the Assembly.”⁷⁴ Later the same year, the Legislature also amended its standing orders to assert that “the working language of the Assembly, its committees, and any official publications recording its proceedings shall be in English.”⁷⁵

⁶⁶ Supra note 33.

⁶⁷ Legislative Assembly, Alberta Hansard, 7 (20 June 1986) at 160 (Mr. Piquette).

⁶⁸ See Timothy Christian, “L’Affaire Piquette” in David Schneiderman, ed., Language and the State: The Law and Politics of Identity (Cowansville, Quebec: Yvon Blais, 1991) at 107.

⁶⁹ Legislative Assembly, Alberta Hansard, 32 (7 April 1987) at 631.

⁷⁰ L. Piquette, MLA Athabasca-Lac La Biche, to D. J. Carter, Speaker, Legislative Assembly of Alberta (8 April 1987). See Alberta, Legislative Assembly, Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing, Minutes (6 May 1987) exhibit 2.

⁷¹ Alberta, Legislative Assembly, Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing, Minutes (23 June 1987) at 154.

⁷² Ibid. at 174.

⁷³ Alberta, Legislative Assembly, Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing, Minutes (25 June 1987) at 212.

⁷⁴ Ibid.

⁷⁵ Legislative Assembly, Alberta Hansard, 99 (27 November 1987) at 2093 (Hon. Leslie G. Young).

A few months later, in R. v. Mercure,⁷⁶ the Supreme Court of Canada confirmed unequivocally that s. 110 of the *North-West Territories Act*⁷⁷ was still in vigour. It noted that laws giving expression to language rights possess an almost constitutional nature and can only be repealed by "clear legislative pronouncement." The restructuring of the courts or other institutions has no effect on such provisions since "different courts can come and go but the law remains."⁷⁸ Similarly, the Court ruled that the adoption of certain rules of court indicating that English is the language of proceedings should not be interpreted as interfering with vested rights. Where there is a conflict between a fundamental law and other specific legislation, "the human rights legislation must govern."⁷⁹ Further, the long-standing practice of using English exclusively in the debates, statutes and court proceedings does not in any way change the statutory protection accorded the French language since "statutes do not, of course, cease to be law from mere disuse."⁸⁰ In sum:

Section 110 of The North-West Territories Act was a law existing at the establishment of the province. Since no provision of the Saskatchewan Act was inconsistent with s. 110 or was intended as a substitute for it, and since there was no amendment of the provisions of that section with respect to the language of the statutes and of the proceedings in the courts, it follows that s. 110 continues in effect for that purpose and that the statutes of Saskatchewan must be enacted, printed and published in English and French and that both languages may be used in the Saskatchewan courts.⁸¹

Saskatchewan moved quickly to deal with this awkward situation by adopting, in both official languages, a law explicitly declaring that s. 110 of the North-West Territories Act "does not apply to Saskatchewan with respect to matters within the legislative authority of Saskatchewan."⁸² Alberta, as we shall see, followed suit shortly afterwards.⁸³

B. THE SCHOOL ACT, 1905 TO PRESENT

Section 136 of the North-West Territories' School Ordinance had established English as the sole language of school instruction and in 1905 this provision too was carried over into the new province of Alberta. Specifically, as the section's first paragraph stated: "All schools shall be taught in the English language but it shall be permissible for the board of any district to cause a primary course to be taught in the French language."⁸⁴

Daniel Mowat, the MLA for South Regina, had successfully proposed this provision in 1892, arguing that "we would never have true patriotic feeling in the country until there was one language."⁸⁵ A year earlier he had introduced a similar proposition, but without any concession to the French language. Mowat justified his revised proposal by explaining that the "provision to make the teaching of English compulsory was rendered necessary on ⁷⁶ [1988] 1 S.C.R. 234 at 237 [Mercure].

⁷⁷ Supra note 33.

⁷⁸ Mercure, supra note 76 at 263.

⁷⁹ Ibid. at 267.

⁸⁰ Ibid. at 255.

⁸¹ Ibid. at 236.

⁸² See Language Act, S.S. 1988, c. L-61, s. 13.

⁸³ See Languages Act, S.A. 1988, c. L-7.5, s. 7.

⁸⁴ School Ordinance, C.O.N.W.T. 1905, c. 75, s. 136.

⁸⁵ "The Legislature" The [Regina] Leader (18 August 1892) 1.

account of the large influx of foreigners. An exception was made in favor of teaching a primary course in French, as the French were fellow Canadians.⁸⁶ This “exception” allowed a course in reading and composition at the primary level (that is, during the first two years of schooling).⁸⁷ However, the prescribed text, a bilingual reader, was — perhaps by design — best suited for teaching English to the French-speaking population. When the course was offered, the allotted time generally varied between a half-hour and a full hour per day, strictly controlled by the local school inspector.⁸⁸

A second paragraph, adopted in 1901 after German-speakers had petitioned the Legislative Assembly for school instruction in German, permitted a school board to “employ one or more competent persons to give instructions in any language other than English” subject to the departmental regulations and on condition that this not interfere with the required school program and that the costs be collected directly from the parents concerned.⁸⁹ The Department of Education regulations subsequently provided some clarification: “Such instruction shall be given between the hours of three and four o’clock in the afternoon of such school days as may be selected by the board and shall be confined to the teaching of reading, composition and grammar. The text books used shall be those authorized by the Commissioner of Education.”⁹⁰ The program was seldom implemented, however, since, as the legislators had probably anticipated, the immigrant population lacked the means to pay for it.⁹¹

Justifiably, John R. Boyle, Minister of Education from 1912 to 1918, could boast that in Alberta “we have no Bi-lingual schools.... English is the only language permitted to be used as the medium of instruction in our schools.”⁹² In 1915, during a by-election held in Whitford, he accused the Conservative opposition of catering to the immigrant vote by advocating the establishment of Ukrainian schools.⁹³ The opposition, eager to prove its innocence, immediately moved a resolution: “That this House place itself on record as being opposed to Bi-lingualism in any form in the School system of Alberta, and as in favour of the English language being the only language permitted to be used as the medium of instruction in the schools of Alberta, subject to the provisions of any law now in force in the Province in that effect.”⁹⁴ The Liberal government, caught in its own trap, voted with the opposition and the resolution passed unanimously.

⁸⁶ “Legislative Assembly” The Edmonton Bulletin (22 August 1892) 2.

⁸⁷ Yvette T.M. Mahé, “L’enseignement du français dans les districts scolaires bilingues albertains, 1885-1939” (1992) 4 Cahiers franco-canadiens de l’Ouest 291 at 294-95.

⁸⁸ Ibid. at 295.

⁸⁹ School Ordinance, O.N.W.T. 1901, c. 29, s. 136.

⁹⁰ Regulations of the Department of Education (Regina: John A. Reid, 1903), s. 25.

⁹¹ In 1916 Bishop Legal received legal advice that this regulation conflicted with the provision for a French-language primary course taught during school hours. His solicitors also noted that “no other language other than French has been taught between the hours of three and four in the afternoon limited to grammar, reading, and composition, except perhaps in some isolated districts where the teacher had taken the liberty to do as she pleased.” See S.T. Rusak, Relations in Education between Bishop Legal and the Alberta Government, 1905-1920 (M.Ed. Thesis, University of Alberta, 1966) at 94-95.

⁹² Cited in J. Castell Hopkins, The Canadian Annual Review of Public Affairs, 1913 (Toronto: Annual Review Publishing Company, 1914) at 655.

⁹³ “La question bilingue à la législature d’Alberta” Le Courrier de l’Ouest (8 April 1915) 1.

⁹⁴ J. Castell Hopkins, The Canadian Annual Review of Public Affairs, 1915 (Toronto: Annual Review Publishing Company, 1916) at 702.

In the meantime, the French-speaking community lobbied cautiously for the right to expand French-language instruction in their schools. Knowing that the government would not amend the *School Ordinance*⁹⁵ for this purpose, French leaders astutely focused instead on the interpretation given the existing statute. In particular, they sought to redefine the expression “a primary course” to mean any instruction given during the first two years of schooling. In 1925 these efforts finally paid off and the Department of Education discretely published new instructions for the teaching of French:

In all schools in which the board by resolution decides to offer a primary course in French, in accordance with Sec. 184 of the School Ordinance, French shall be for the French-speaking children one of the authorized subjects of study and may be used as medium of instruction for other subjects during the first school year. Oral English must, however, from the beginning be included in the curriculum as a subject of study. During the second year and after the child has learned to read in the mother tongue, the formal teaching of reading in English shall be begun. From Grade III on, a period not exceeding one hour each day may be allotted to the teaching of French.⁹⁶

Four decades later the provincial government modified the *School Act*⁹⁷ to formally confirm this practice. A 1964 amendment provided that French might be the language of instruction up to grade nine on condition that in grades one and two “at least one hour a day shall be devoted to instruction in English,” in grade three “not more than two hours a day shall be devoted to instruction in French,” and in grades four through nine “not more than one hour a day shall be devoted to instruction in French.”⁹⁸

In 1968, the national tidal wave of official bilingualism, marked by a federal Official Languages Act,⁹⁹ carried the province along in its wake. The Government of Alberta again amended the School Act,¹⁰⁰ this time to permit the use of French for up to “50 percent of the total period of time devoted to classroom instruction each day” in grades three through twelve.¹⁰¹ In 1971 it also took a significant step towards multiculturalism by placing all other languages, the so-called “heritage languages,” on a footing similar to French: “A board may authorize (a) that French be used as a language of instruction, or (b) that any other language be used as a language of instruction in addition to the English language, in all or any of its schools.”¹⁰² The Minister of Education later permitted instruction in these languages, notably Ukrainian, during 50 percent of each school day for grades one through three.¹⁰³ In 1976 this was extended to grades four through six, in 1980 to grades seven and eight, and, finally, in ⁹⁵ Supra note 84.

⁹⁶ Alberta, Legislative Assembly, “Instructions concerning the Teaching of French in the Elementary Schools of the Province of Alberta” in Sessional Papers (1925), Vol. 20, Paper No. 4-e at 1.

⁹⁷ Supra note 12.

⁹⁸ An Act to amend the School Act, S.A. 1964, c. 82, s. 43, amending R.S.A. 1955, c. 297, s. 386 [School Amendment Act, 1964].

⁹⁹ Official Languages Act, S.C. 1968-69, c. 54.

¹⁰⁰ Supra note 98.

¹⁰¹ An Act to amend the School Act, S.A. 1968, c. 89, s. 24, amending R.S.A. 1955, c. 297, s. 386 [School Amendment Act, 1968].

¹⁰² An Act to amend the School Act, S.A. 1971, c. 100, s. 18, amending R.S.A. 1970, c. 329, s. 150 [School Amendment Act, 1971].

¹⁰³ P. Lamoureux, Bilingual Schooling in Alberta (Edmonton: Alberta Education, 1984) at 3-4.

1983 to grades nine through twelve.¹⁰⁴ In a 1988 report the government declared that: "Alberta Education supports the provision of opportunities for students who wish to acquire or maintain languages other than English or French so that they may have access to a partial immersion (bilingual) program or second language courses in languages other than English or French."¹⁰⁵ The same report noted that some 2,775 students were enrolled in these bilingual programs, chiefly in Ukrainian (1,362), but also in Hebrew (458), German (339), Arabic (265), Mandarin (234) and Polish (117).¹⁰⁶ They accounted for 1.5 percent of all enrollments in provincial language programs or courses.

In 1976 the provincial government again expanded the number of hours available for French-language instruction by reducing the English-language minimum. As before, schools were obliged to offer at least one hour of English instruction per day in grades one and two but they were now freed from the 50 percent rule for subsequent grades. Instead, French-language schools could limit their English instruction to 190 hours per year in grades three through six, 150 hours in grades seven through nine and 125 hours in grades ten through twelve.¹⁰⁷ This meant, in effect, that French-language instruction could occupy up to 80 percent of regular class time.

On 23 February 1978 Premier Peter Lougheed signed a national statement on minority language rights: "Each child of the French-speaking or English-speaking minority is entitled to an education in his or her language in the primary or secondary schools in each province wherever numbers warrant."¹⁰⁸ The following day, however, he issued a distinctly Albertan clarification:

It should be recognized that the provision of French language instruction is not limited to those students whose mother tongue is French. In fact, because of Alberta's population mix and distribution, many boards must rely on large numbers of students whose mother tongue is other than French in establishing classes where French is used as the language of instruction. It will continue to be our policy to allow admission to French language programs regardless of mother-tongue.¹⁰⁹

Alberta thereby diverged from the national consensus, refusing to distinguish between immersion schools designed for the English-speaking majority and Francophone schools intended for the French-speaking minority.

This refusal took on added significance when, several years later, the Constitution Act, 1982 guaranteed the right of official language minorities to have their children instructed "in minority language educational facilities provided out of public funds."¹¹⁰ Since Alberta's French-language educational facilities were, in reality, immersion schools and not minority schools, they fell considerably short of the constitutional requirement. In 1982 a group of ¹⁰⁴ Ibid.

¹⁰⁵ Alberta, Government of Alberta, Language Education Policy for Alberta (Edmonton, 1988) at 16.

¹⁰⁶ Ibid. at 22.

¹⁰⁷ French Language Regulations, Alta. Reg. 250/76.

¹⁰⁸ Canada, Premiers' Conference, "Statement on Language" (23 February 1978).

¹⁰⁹ Alberta, Government of Alberta, "Statement by Premier Peter Lougheed and Education Minister Julian Koziak RE: Minority Language Instruction" (24 February 1978).

¹¹⁰ Constitution Act, 1982, supra note 15, s. 23(3).

French-speaking parents, led by Jean-Claude Mahé, Angéline Martel and Paul Dubé, attempted to obtain French minority schooling for their children by contacting, first, the Minister of Education and then, on his advice, the Edmonton Public School Board and the Edmonton Catholic School Board. When their efforts failed, the parents took the province to court, claiming that the *School Act*¹¹¹ contravened s. 23 of the Constitution Act, 1982.¹¹² In 1985 Purvis J. of the Alberta Court of Queen's Bench ruled in their favour and ordered the province to make specific provision for French minority schools.¹¹³ Two years later, Kerans J., speaking for the Alberta Court of Appeal, confirmed this decision.¹¹⁴

The province responded in 1988 by adopting a School Act that now recognized, albeit awkwardly and ambiguously, the right to French minority schooling: "If an individual has rights under section 23 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms to have his children receive school instruction in French, his children are entitled to receive that instruction in accordance with those rights wherever in the Province those rights apply."¹¹⁵ Unsatisfied, the parents appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada claiming that the provincial legislation still failed to provide for minority schools, that is, schools managed and controlled by the French-speaking minority. The Court agreed and, in 1990, ruled that the province must enact legislation granting exclusive authority to the French minority for decisions relating to the minority language instruction and facilities, including: (a) expenditures of funds provided for such instruction and facilities; (b) appointment and direction of those responsible for the administration of such instruction and facilities; (c) establishment of programs of instruction; (d) recruitment and assignment of teachers and other personnel; and (e) the making of agreements for education and services for minority language pupils.¹¹⁶

The Government of Alberta reacted negatively to this decision and initially threatened to use the so-called "notwithstanding" clause in order to override these language rights.¹¹⁷ When advised that s. 23 was not subject to derogation, it reluctantly began searching for a school management model that would meet the standards defined by the Supreme Court. It appointed a French Language Working Group charged with recommending an appropriate model and then later a Francophone School Governance Implementation Committee, charged with implementing the model. Finally, in 1993, the Legislative Assembly amended the *School Act*¹¹⁸ to provide for minority school boards, described formally as "Regional authorities for Francophone Education Regions"¹¹⁹ By this time, there were already 13 French minority schools in the province, with a total enrollment of 2,105 students.¹²⁰

¹¹¹ Supra note 12.

¹¹² Supra note 15.

¹¹³ Mahé v. Alberta (1985), 39 Alta. L.R. (2d) 215.

¹¹⁴ Mahé v. Alberta (1987), 54 Alta. L.R. (2d) 212.

¹¹⁵ School Act, S.A. 1988, c. S-3.1, s. 5(1).

¹¹⁶ Mahé v. Alberta, [1990] 1 S.C.R. 342 at 345.

¹¹⁷ For a more detailed examination of the Alberta government's response to the Mahé decision, see Edmund A. Aunger, "Dispersed Minorities and Segmental Autonomy: French-Language School Boards in Canada" (1996) 2 Nationalism and Ethnic Politics 191 at 205-11.

¹¹⁸ Supra note 115.

¹¹⁹ School Amendment Act, 1993, S.A. 1993, c. 24, s. 24.

¹²⁰ Aunger, supra note 117 at 207.

The revised school system featured seven new school districts or “Francophone Education Regions” that together covered the entire province, although each centered on a different urban cluster: Edmonton, Calgary, St. Paul-Bonnyville, Peace River-Fahler, Fort McMurray, Red Deer and Lethbridge. The regional authorities were responsible for the management and control of French minority schools in their region, including: tracking eligible students and facilitating their education in French, representing French-speaking parents, promoting French-language instruction in the province, maintaining links with other regional authorities and developing rules and regulations for French education.¹²¹ Further, as school boards, they were empowered by the School Act to establish policies for the provision of educational services and programs, to employ teachers and non-teaching personnel including administrators and supervisors, to maintain and furnish their real property, to make rules respecting the attendance and transportation of students and generally, to deal with all matters within their jurisdiction.¹²²

The Fédération des parents francophones de l'Alberta was charged with organizing the first elections, held in March 1994. The regional authorities, themselves, were responsible for subsequent elections, to be held every three years beginning in October 1995. (Legislative reforms resulted in the most recent elections being delayed until May 2002.) Any Canadian citizen 18 years or older and an Alberta resident is eligible for election to a regional authority.¹²³ The right to vote, however, is limited to any “Francophone” who has “a child who is a student enrolled in a school operated by the Regional authority.”¹²⁴ The Government of Alberta is authorized to extend voting rights to the members of a prescribed “class of individuals,” presumably the province’s French-speaking population, but has never done so. The restricted franchise was designed to prevent opponents of French minority education from taking over regional authorities, and then eliminating the French-language schools. As such, it reveals much about Alberta’s French-speaking community and its bitter struggle for minority language rights.

The revised School Act published in 2000 contains a preamble that, for the first time, highlights minority schooling, proclaiming that the Regional authority of a Francophone Education Region has a unique responsibility and the authority to ensure that both minority language educational rights and the rights and privileges with respect to separate schools guaranteed under the Constitution of Canada are protected in the Region, such that the principles of francophone educational governance are distinct from, not transferable to nor a precedent for, the English educational system.¹²⁵

This responsibility was reiterated more precisely in a 2001 amendment requiring that “[a] Regional authority must designate each school either as a public school or as a separate ¹²¹ Alberta, Alberta Education, Guide de mise en oeuvre de la gestion scolaire francophone (Edmonton: School Business Administration Services, 1994) at 9.

¹²² Supra note 115, ss. 44, 74, 77. (According to s. 3 of the School Amendment Act, 1993, supra note 119, any reference in the law to a school board is deemed to include a regional authority.)

¹²³ School Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. S-3, s. 256(3).

¹²⁴ Ibid., s. 256(1).

¹²⁵ Ibid., Preamble.

school.”¹²⁶ In 2003-2004 the province could boast five regional authorities administering 18 French Catholic schools and seven French Public schools with a combined total of 3,638 registered students.¹²⁷

C. SECTION 27 OF THE INTERPRETATION ACT, 1919-1980

On 17 April 1919 the Alberta Legislature adopted an amendment to the Interpretation Act,¹²⁸ affirming English as the province’s official language. It appended an additional interpretive rule to the Act’s already lengthy 60-point list: “Unless otherwise provided where any Act requires public records to be kept or any written process to be had or taken it shall be interpreted to mean that such records or such process shall be in the English language.”¹²⁹ The province had inherited some 124 ordinances from the North-West Territories, regulating a wide range of activities including elections, government departments, public printing, public health, civil justice, marriage, professions and trades, companies, municipalities, schools, agriculture, liquor sales, tax assessment and insurance — and the great majority did indeed require the keeping of public records or the taking of written process.¹³⁰ The Elections Ordinance, for example, described in exquisite detail a plethora of required written records and procedures including the issuing of writs, the publication and posting of notices, the taking of oaths and statements, the printing of ballots, the recording of electoral information, the keeping of poll books and record books, the certification of nominations and elections, the serving of summons and the filing of appeals.¹³¹

Oddly, the English language amendment was buried deeply within an omnibus housekeeping bill modifying 51 different statutes, formally entitled An Act to amend The Factories Act, The Liquor Act, The Soldiers’ Home Tax Exemption Act, and certain other Acts and Ordinances.¹³² The Bill made only a fleeting appearance in the legislature, attracting little attention and no debate. Its second reading, late on a Monday afternoon, was completely upstaged by lengthy and heated exchanges concerning the practice of chiropractic. The legislative reporter’s summary was revealingly brief and inarticulate: “The house agreed without discussion to the second readings of two acts introduced by the attorney general, one to amend the factories act, the liquor act, and other effected by the special revisions of certain measures; and the other to postpone the commencement of certain other acts.”¹³³

John R. Boyle, now the Attorney General, had sponsored the Bill and, whatever his reasoning, his timing was impeccable. Alberta was at the time a fervid hotbed of pro-English exclusivism. The Great War had recently ended and the province was celebrating its returning heroes, virtually all British-born or British-origin volunteers. Gerald Friesen has observed that there was, at the time, a “growing hatred of all things German,” combined with ¹²⁶ School Amendment Act, 2001, S.A. 2001, c. 27, s. 25, amending R.S.A. 2000, c. S-3, s. 255.3.

¹²⁷ Éric Batalla & Sandra Griffon, Écoles francophones, Alberta (Edmonton: Le Franco & La Fédération des conseils scolaires francophones de l’Alberta, 2003).

¹²⁸ S.A. 1906, c. 3.

¹²⁹ Statute Law Amendment Act, S.A. 1919, c. 4, s. 30, amending S.A. 1906, c. 3, s. 7.

¹³⁰ C.O.N.W.T. 1905.

¹³¹ Elections Ordinance, C.O.N.W.T. 1905, c. 3.

¹³² Supra note 129.

¹³³ “Chiropractic Bill removed from Agenda” The [Edmonton] Morning Bulletin (15 April 1919) at 5.

prejudice against "southeastern Europeans, including especially the Ukrainian immigrants from the Hapsburg empire," and also "European pacifists, including Doukhobors and Mennonites."¹³⁴ A few months earlier the federal government had suppressed publications in "enemy" languages including German, Russian, Ukrainian, Hungarian and Finnish.¹³⁵ Only a week prior to the Bill's second reading, Attorney General Boyle had reminded the provincial house that "[he] won [his] election by the English vote," unlike an opponent who had advocated "Russian schools for Russian people."¹³⁶ "I stood for one school and one language, and naturally my majority came from the English electors."¹³⁷

The legislature's inconspicuous support for the English language amendment contrasted dramatically with the outspoken stance of the Orange Order. A few weeks earlier, on 20 March 1919, at meetings addressed by the Mayor of Edmonton and the Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta, the Grand Orange Lodge of Alberta adopted the following resolution:

That in the interests of a united Canada urgent representation be made to the federal and provincial governments, so far as their respective jurisdictions are concerned, (1) to enact legislation whereby the English language shall be the sole medium of instruction in every grade of every school under government control, and (2) to enforce the existing law of the land so that within the province of Alberta the English language only shall be read officially on any public form or document, or in any public office, school or assembly.¹³⁸

The Orangemen also called upon the federal government to "enact legislation preventing the immigration of persons from alien enemy countries or of such extraction, for a period of twenty years and further, to deport all such aliens now in Canada unless they furnish ample proof of loyalty."¹³⁹

In 1922, when Alberta's statutes were consolidated, the English language provision was numbered s. 35, labelled "English as official language" and published in revised form: "Whenever by any Act public records are required to be kept or any written process to be had or taken, the records or process shall be kept, had or taken in the English language."¹⁴⁰ The 1942 consolidation retained this same wording and labelling, although the provision now became s. 40.¹⁴¹ The 1955 revised statutes made minor changes to the text, but retained the number and label.¹⁴² Three years later, however, the legislature adopted a new Interpretation Act, still keeping the English language provision, but this time as s. 27, with the label "Public records" and the text: "Where by an enactment public records are required to be kept or any written process to be had or taken, the records or process shall be had or taken in the English language."¹⁴³ The provision was repealed in 1980.¹⁴⁴ (The frequent renumbering may have ¹³⁴ Gerald Friesen, The Canadian Prairies: A History (Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1984) at 352.

¹³⁵ Ibid. at 354.

¹³⁶ "Spirited Passage between the Attorney General and Jas. Weir enlivens Work on Estimates" The [Edmonton] Morning Bulletin (8 April 1919) 1.

¹³⁷ Ibid.

¹³⁸ "Resolutions passed by the Orange Lodge" The [Edmonton] Morning Bulletin (21 April 1919) 1.

¹³⁹ Ibid.

¹⁴⁰ Interpretation Act, R.S.A. 1922, c. 1, s. 35.

¹⁴¹ Interpretation Act, R.S.A. 1942, c. 1, s. 40.

¹⁴² Interpretation Act, R.S.A. 1955, c. 160, s. 40.

¹⁴³ Interpretation Act, S.A. 1958, c. 32, s. 27.

¹⁴⁴ Interpretation Act, S.A. 1980, c. 70, s. 41.

caused occasional confusion: Claude-Armand Sheppard reported, mistakenly, that it had been repealed in 1958.¹⁴⁵)

Alberta's English language provision was rarely applied by the courts. In a 1965 ruling on the validity of a French-language bill of sale, Tavender J. described the provision as "the only reference in any Alberta statute to the use of the English language," but he found it of no assistance in the case at hand.¹⁴⁶ In his view the bill was a private document, while the Interpretation Act referred to public records, defined as "certain records or documents which are kept by certain government officials whose duty it is to inquire into and record permanently matters and facts about public matters."¹⁴⁷ Justice Tavender instead looked to earlier legislation, including the North-West Territories Act,¹⁴⁸ determining thereby that French was the "customary language of the people," and that its use "continued to be lawful."¹⁴⁹ Further, in an unexpected aside, he concluded, "In the light of the above statutes it would appear that in the Province of Alberta French is a permissive language in the Legislative Assembly and in the Courts."¹⁵⁰

This startling conclusion was largely ignored. In Lefebvre, for example, Greschuk J., took no notice, holding that "if s. 110 continued in force in Alberta after the courts of the Northwest Territories ceased to exist, it was repealed by implication, operation of law or unavoidable inference."¹⁵¹ More specifically, Greschuk J. held that "s. 27 of the Interpretation Act, 1958, undermines the necessary intendment of s. 110 and the latter accordingly must be held to be repealed by implication."¹⁵² At the provincial court level, Marshall J. found similarly that the English language provision had repealed Alberta's official bilingualism, the Lefebvre decision being a binding authority.¹⁵³ However, on appeal Sinclair J. disagreed, ruling that s. 110 had never been repealed.¹⁵⁴ Justices Stevenson and Irving of the Court of Appeal upheld this decision on further appeal.¹⁵⁵ Nevertheless, neither they nor Sinclair J. made any reference to the Interpretation Act.

In 1980, when the Alberta legislature adopted a new Interpretation Act, the English language provision finally disappeared — as quietly as it had originally appeared.¹⁵⁶ A government backbencher introduced the Bill, but gave no explanation or justification.¹⁵⁷ Nor ¹⁴⁵ Sheppard, supra note 4 at 91.

¹⁴⁶ General Motors Acceptance Corporation of Canada Ltd. v. Perozni (1965), 51 D.L.R. (2d) 724 at 736 (Alta. Dist. Ct.).

¹⁴⁷ Ibid.

¹⁴⁸ Supra note 33.

¹⁴⁹ Ibid. at 730ff.

¹⁵⁰ Ibid. at 734.

¹⁵¹ Lefebvre (1982), supra note 50 at 674.

¹⁵² Ibid. at 673.

¹⁵³ Between Her Majesty The Queen and Luc Paquette (26 October 1984), (Alta. Prov. Ct.) [unreported] reprinted in Jules Deschênes, Ainsi parlèrent les tribunaux..., vol. 2, Conflits linguistiques au Canada, 1968-1985 (Montreal: Wilson & Lafleur) 683 at 689, 693.

¹⁵⁴ Paquette (1985), supra note 54.

¹⁵⁵ Paquette (1987), supra note 58.

¹⁵⁶ Supra note 144, c. 70.

¹⁵⁷ Legislative Assembly, Alberta Hansard, 64 (20 November 1980) at 1613 (Mr. Wolstenholme).

was he ever called upon to do so. The Bill sailed through the assembly, including committee of the whole, without question or comment.¹⁵⁸

D. THE LANGUAGES ACT, 1988 TO PRESENT

On 25 February 1988, less than a year after the Alberta Legislative Assembly had denied ND member Leo Piquette the right to speak French and bullyingly denigrated his protests, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled that s. 110 of the North-West Territories Act,¹⁵⁹ providing for official bilingualism, did indeed remain in effect in Saskatchewan and, by implication, in Alberta.¹⁶⁰ This meant that both English and French could be spoken in the provincial legislature and courts. Further, the Legislature was obligated to publish its statutes in both languages.

Nevertheless, the province could, if it wished, adopt a statute to repeal this provision although, paradoxically, any such statute had to “be enacted, printed and published in the English and French languages.”¹⁶¹ Thus, on 22 June 1988, Attorney General James Horsman introduced a bilingual bill entitled the Languages Act, providing that “[s]ection 110 of The North-West Territories Act, chapter 50 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, as it existed on September 1, 1905, does not apply to Alberta with respect to matters within the legislative authority of Alberta.”¹⁶² Horsman justified the new Bill without embarrassment and without apology:

Mr. Speaker, we are dealing with the reality of the fact that the Mercure decision has said that an Act passed in 1886 — which had never been used in this province, never been implemented, had fallen into complete disuse in the Northwest Territories prior to Alberta becoming a province in 1905 — is still the law because of a technicality.... We have now been told by the Supreme Court of Canada how we must proceed in order to change that antiquated, unused piece of legislation which was a hangover from 1886.¹⁶³

The Assembly’s first step had been to suspend the standing order, adopted only a few months earlier, on November 27, establishing English as the language of the Legislature, its committees and its publications, and preventing members from speaking French without the Speaker’s prior consent. The Attorney General then submitted his new Bill, arguing, exclusively in English, that it was “fair and reasonable and practical and recognizes the reality of Alberta and the distinct nature of Alberta society.”¹⁶⁴ The Liberal leader, Nick Taylor, retorted that it was “nothing more than summoning up the prejudices of centuries past and taking a poke at a defenseless minority under the guise that it reflects Alberta’s reality.”¹⁶⁵ Attorney General Horsman was the only member of the governing Conservative party to participate in the debate. Nine members of the 20-person opposition intervened, however, and several made comments in French. The Speaker conducted the proceedings in both languages, announcing each reading and each vote in English and in French, as did the ¹⁵⁸ Legislative Assembly, Alberta Hansard, 68 (26 November 1980) at 1751 (Mr. Wolstenholme).

¹⁵⁹ Supra note 33.

¹⁶⁰ Mercure, supra note 76.

¹⁶¹ Ibid. at 280.

¹⁶² Supra note 83, s. 7.

¹⁶³ Legislative Assembly, Alberta Hansard, 102 (30 June 1988) at 2171 (Mr. Horsman).

¹⁶⁴ Ibid. at 2170.

¹⁶⁵ Ibid.

chairman in committee of the whole. In one typically ironic turn of events, however, the chairman refused to accept an opposition amendment calling for the translation of selected laws into French because the amendment itself had not been translated into French.¹⁶⁶

The Languages Act suppressed s. 110 of the North-West Territories Act and its requirement that all statutes be enacted and printed in French. This measure drew public attention and was hotly debated. However, the Act also provided that “[m]embers of the Assembly may use English and French in the Assembly”¹⁶⁷ and that “[a]ny person may use English or French in oral communication” in court proceedings.¹⁶⁸ These provisions attracted relatively little public discussion.

There has been a modest increase in French language activity in the Legislature since 1988, but its use remains relatively symbolic. For example, in 1999 Nancy MacBeth, the leader of the official opposition, spoke in French when she congratulated the government on its creation of a Secrétariat aux affaires francophones but then she repeated her remarks in English.¹⁶⁹ Two years later the president of this secretariat, MLA Denis Ducharme, also spoke in French when he announced that the Association canadienne-française de l’Alberta was celebrating its 75th anniversary.¹⁷⁰ Ducharme did not repeat this announcement in English, but he did provide a written translation, and this too was printed in Hansard.¹⁷¹

French continues to get short shrift in civil matters before Alberta’s courts, largely because the province has failed to guarantee the presence of a bilingual judge. As McIntosh J. of the Provincial Court has pointedly explained:

With respect, you can do all the talking in French that you like but in Alberta, with respect, Provincial matters are conducted in English, so if you’re going to communicate with me you’ll have to do it in English, or you will have to have somebody here that can assist you in English. But this trial is conducted in English. That’s the law in Alberta, for Provincial Statutes.¹⁷²

In criminal matters, of course, the government must comply with federal law and this grants an accused, on application, the right to “be tried before a justice of the peace, provincial court judge, judge or judge and jury, as the case may be, who speak the official language of Canada that is the language of the accused or, if the circumstances warrant, who speak both official languages of Canada.”¹⁷³

¹⁶⁶ Ibid. at 2153.

¹⁶⁷ Languages Act, supra note 83, s. 5(1).

¹⁶⁸ Ibid. s. 4(1).

¹⁶⁹ Legislative Assembly, Alberta Hansard, 17 (16 March 1999) at 543 (Nancy MacBeth).

¹⁷⁰ Legislative Assembly, Alberta Hansard, vol. II (30 May 2001) at 933 (Mr. Ducharme).

¹⁷¹ Ibid.

¹⁷² R. v. Desgagné (13 June 1996), Peace River A 06115443 T at 3 (Alta. Prov. Ct.); cited in Canada, Department of Justice and Department of Canadian Heritage, Annotated Language Laws of Canada, 2d ed. (Ottawa: Department of Public Works and Government Services, 2000) at 208.

¹⁷³ Criminal Code, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-46, s. 530(1).

III. THEMATIC OVERVIEW OF INCIDENTAL LANGUAGE PROVISIONS

The historical summary of the principal language provisions in Alberta dispels a common myth. Contrary to popular perception, the provincial government has, over the past century, intervened significantly to legislate language use, thereby restricting personal liberty and individual choice. However, this summary, focusing on only four statutes, does not adequately capture the full breadth of this intervention, nor the immense number of provisions.

For this reason, it is appropriate to present a thematic overview of Alberta's language provisions, modeled on a modern provincial charter, Quebec's Charter of the French Language.¹⁷⁴ The Québec Charter, of course, produced shock waves that reverberated across the country. Its impact on Quebec's economic, political, social and cultural sectors was sufficient, according to Guy Rocher, to provoke a second Quiet Revolution, more powerful than the first.¹⁷⁵ The Québec Charter's impressive scope is evident in Title I: Status of the French language, including nine chapters: The official language of Québec; Fundamental language rights; The language of the legislature and the courts; The language of the civil administration; The language of the semi-public agencies; The language of labour relations; The language of commerce and business; The language of instruction; and Miscellaneous.

The thematic overview of Alberta's language legislation uses this same organizational structure in order to demonstrate that Alberta's provisions, like Quebec's, have been strikingly comprehensive and far-reaching. The chief differences have not been in content or breadth, but in timing. The Québec Charter was adopted dramatically, in one fell swoop, in 1977 and in spite of subsequent modifications, still remains in force today. The Alberta legislation was adopted secretively, one piece at a time, over more than a century and its most oppressive provisions are no longer in effect. Such provisions are no longer necessary, having accomplished their desired effect — the creation of a largely unilingual province.

A. THE OFFICIAL LANGUAGES OF ALBERTA

Section 110 of the North-West Territories Act established English and French as the official languages of the province's legislature and courts.¹⁷⁶ In obvious contradiction, a 1919 amendment to the Interpretation Act formally recognized English alone as the official language for public records.¹⁷⁷ In 1988 the Languages Act finally resolved this anomaly when it repealed s. 110, and then validated all acts and regulations enacted, printed and published exclusively in English.¹⁷⁸ Nevertheless, it also granted French a very limited official status by permitting its use for oral communication in the courts and the legislature.¹⁷⁹

¹⁷⁴ R.S.Q., c. C-11 [Québec Charter].

¹⁷⁵ Guy Rocher, "La politique et la loi linguistiques du Québec en 1977" in Michel Plourde, ed., Le français au Québec: 400 ans d'histoire et de vie (Québec: Conseil de la langue française, 2000) 273 at 283.

¹⁷⁶ Supra note 33.

¹⁷⁷ Statute Law Amendment Act, S.A. 1919, c. 4, s. 30, amending S.A. 1906, c. 3, s. 7.

¹⁷⁸ Supra note 83.

¹⁷⁹ Ibid., ss. 4-5.

B. FUNDAMENTAL LANGUAGE RIGHTS

1. LEGISLATURE AND COURTS

The North-West Territories Act provided that “[e]ither the English or the French language may be used by any person in the debates of the Council or Legislative Assembly of the territories and in the proceedings before the courts.”¹⁸⁰ The Languages Act now provides that “[m]embers of the Assembly may use English and French in the Assembly”¹⁸¹ and that “[a]ny person may use English or French in oral communication in proceedings before the ... courts.”¹⁸²

2. SCHOOL INSTRUCTION

Since 1988, Alberta’s School Act has provided that “[e]very student is entitled to receive school instruction in English.”¹⁸³ In accordance with the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms,¹⁸⁴ the same Act also declares, since 1993, that a “student who is enrolled in a school operated by a Regional authority is entitled to receive school instruction in French.”¹⁸⁵

3. MENTAL HEALTH

In 1972 the Mental Health Act recognized the right of a person, upon becoming a formal patient or the subject of renewal certificates, to “be informed of the reason for his admission or the issuance of renewal certificates in simple language” and to be given a written statement describing the authority for the detention and explaining the right of appeal.¹⁸⁶ Further, “[i]n the event of language difficulty, the board shall obtain a suitable interpreter and provide the explanation and written statement ... in the language spoken by the formal patient or his nearest relative.”¹⁸⁷ Since 1988 a patient may claim this right only after two admission certificates or two renewal certificates have been issued.¹⁸⁸

C. THE LANGUAGE OF THE LEGISLATURE AND THE COURTS

1. ASSEMBLY DEBATES

The North-West Territories Act recognized the right to speak either English or French in the legislative assembly.¹⁸⁹ In 1987 the Alberta Legislative Assembly adopted a standing order providing that “the working language of the Assembly, its committees and any official ¹⁸⁰ Supra note 33, s. 110.

¹⁸¹ Languages Act, supra note 83, s. 5(1).

¹⁸² Ibid., s. 4(1).

¹⁸³ Supra note 123, s. 9.

¹⁸⁴ Part I of the Constitution Act, 1982, being Schedule B to the Canada Act 1982 (U.K.), 1982, c. 11.

¹⁸⁵ Supra note 123, s. 10(3).

¹⁸⁶ S.A. 1972, c. 118, s. 36(1).

¹⁸⁷ Ibid., s. 36(3).

¹⁸⁸ Mental Health Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. M-13, s. 14(1).

¹⁸⁹ Supra note 33.

publications recording its proceedings shall be in English."¹⁹⁰ Since 1988 the Languages Act has reaffirmed the right to use either English or French in the legislature.¹⁹¹

2. STATUTES AND RECORDS

The North-West Territories Act required that statutes be printed in both English and French, and that "both those languages shall be used in the records and journals of such Assembly."¹⁹² The Languages Act now states simply that "[a]ll acts and regulations may be enacted, printed and published in English"¹⁹³ and, similarly, that the "Standing Orders and records and journals of the Assembly may be made, printed and published in English."¹⁹⁴

3. ASSEMBLY ELECTIONS

The 1909 Alberta Election Act required that the returning officer in each riding publish a proclamation "in the English language" listing the place and time for nominations, the boundaries of the polling subdivisions and the places and times for voting.¹⁹⁵ In 1980 the phrase "in the English language" was suppressed.¹⁹⁶

The same Act also made provision for an interpreter: "If the person desiring to vote is unable to understand the English language the deputy returning officer shall enter a remark to that effect opposite his name in the poll book and may allow him to retire from the polling place until a competent interpreter can be procured."¹⁹⁷ A second paragraph added, somewhat disconcertingly: "If no such interpreter is found or presents himself at the polling place the voter shall not be allowed to vote."¹⁹⁸ A much revised version of the first provision still remains in effect: "A deputy returning officer may appoint in the prescribed form an interpreter at a polling place to translate questions and answers concerning voting procedures for persons not conversant in the English language."¹⁹⁹ However, the second paragraph, permitting the disenfranchisement of non-English-speaking electors, was repealed in 1980.²⁰⁰

4. JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS

The North-West Territories Act provided that either English or French might be used "in the proceedings before the courts."²⁰¹

The 1914 Alberta Rules of Court required that non-English-speaking witnesses be provided with an interpreter during written interrogatories:

¹⁹⁰ Supra note 75.

¹⁹¹ Supra note 83, s. 5(1).

¹⁹² Supra note 33.

¹⁹³ Supra note 29, s. 3.

¹⁹⁴ Ibid., s. 5(3).

¹⁹⁵ S.A. 1909, c. 3, s. 121.

¹⁹⁶ Alberta Election Act, 1980, S.A. 1980, c. 61, s. 51(1).

¹⁹⁷ Supra note 195, s. 175.

¹⁹⁸ Ibid., s. 175(2).

¹⁹⁹ Alberta Election Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. E-1, s. 78.

²⁰⁰ Supra note 196, ss. 72, 196.

²⁰¹ Supra note 33, s. 110.

Where a witness does not understand the English language the order or commission shall, unless otherwise ordered, be executed with the aid of an interpreter nominated by the examiner or commissioner and sworn by him to interpret truly the questions to be put to the witness and his answers thereto, and the examination shall be taken in English.²⁰²

The current Rules of Court include this same provision expressed in almost identical words.²⁰³ A similar procedure is followed during the taking of affidavits when it appears that “the deponent does not understand the English language.”²⁰⁴

The Rules of Court also require that when a request is received from a foreign court the “letter of request for service shall be accompanied by a translation thereof in the English language, and by two copies of the process or citation to be served, and two copies thereof in the English language.”²⁰⁵ Similar rules apply to the enforcement of foreign judgments.²⁰⁶ The Reciprocal Enforcement of Judgments Act reiterates the procedure:

Where a judgment sought to be registered under this Act is in a language other than the English language, the judgment or the exemplification or certified copy of it, as the case may be, shall have attached to it for all purposes of this Act a translation in the English language approved by the Court, and on the approval being given the judgment is deemed to be in the English language.²⁰⁷

Alberta’s Languages Act permits any person to “use English or French in oral communication in proceedings” before the province’s courts.²⁰⁸

5. JURIES

Since 1982 the Jury Act has listed persons who might be exempted from jury duty, including “a person who is unable to understand, speak or read the language in which the trial is to be conducted.”²⁰⁹ On these same grounds a party to civil proceedings is entitled to any number of challenges for cause.²¹⁰ The Jury Act Regulation, adopted in 1983, provides further information on the selection of jurors and notes that “the selection of a jury panel for a jury of French-speaking persons may be made from a list, compiled by the sheriff, of French-speaking persons who have been previously summoned for a jury panel.”²¹¹

²⁰² Alberta Rules of Court, 1914, r. 404.

²⁰³ Alberta Rules of Court, 2001, r. 277.

²⁰⁴ Ibid., r. 303.

²⁰⁵ Ibid., r. 584(a).

²⁰⁶ Ibid., r. 736.4(1)(a).

²⁰⁷ R.S.A. 2000, c. R-6, s. 4. This provision first appeared in the Reciprocal Enforcement of Judgments Act, 1958, S.A. 1958, c. 33, s. 5. For a similar provision, see the Reciprocal Enforcement of Maintenance Orders Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. R-7, s. 14.

²⁰⁸ Supra note 29, s. 4(1).

²⁰⁹ R.S.A. 2000, c. J-3, s. 5(1)(f). This provision first appeared in the Jury Act, S.A. 1982, c. J-2.1, s. 5(1)(f).

²¹⁰ Ibid., s. 12(2)(f).

²¹¹ Alta. Reg. 68/83, s. 2(2.1).

6. POLICING

The Alberta Provincial Police, established in 1916 and then disbanded in 1930, required that all constables be “able to read and write the English language legibly.”²¹²

D. THE LANGUAGE OF THE CIVIL ADMINISTRATION

1. OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS

The official language clause found in the Interpretation Act, from 1919 until 1980, established English as the language of the provincial administration: “Where by an enactment public records are required to be kept or any written process to be had or taken, the records or process shall be had or taken in the English language.”²¹³

2. REQUESTS FOR SERVICE

The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Regulation permits an applicant to make an oral request for access to a record if “the applicant’s ability to read or write English is limited.”²¹⁴ Presumably, the oral request should also be in English.

3. RESIDENCY CRITERIA

For purposes of vocational training grants, an individual is considered to be a resident of Alberta if he “lives or intends to live in Alberta” and “has been admitted to Canada for permanent residence and is pursuing a program of English as a second language.”²¹⁵

4. ELIGIBILITY FOR LOCAL OFFICE

The Town Act, adopted in 1912, required that candidates for election as mayor or councillor be “able to read and write the English language.”²¹⁶ The 1913 Edmonton Charter provided similarly that “[n]o person shall be eligible for election as mayor or alderman, unless he is ... able to read and write the English language.”²¹⁷ The Town and Village Act and the Municipal District Act, as amended on 6 April 1945, also established English-language competence as a condition for eligibility to elected office.²¹⁸ The 1951 City Act added an oral requirement: “No person shall be qualified to be elected mayor or a member of the council of a city unless, — (a) he can speak, read and write the English language.”²¹⁹ The 1968 Municipal Election Act repeated the same provision in somewhat modified form: “To be ²¹² Alberta Provincial Police Act, S.A. 1917, c. 4, s. 8.

²¹³ R.S.A. 1970, c. 189, s. 27.

²¹⁴ Alta. Reg. 200/95, s. 4(a).

²¹⁵ Grants, Donations and Loans Regulation, Alta. Reg. 315/83, Schedule 1, s. 1(2)(c)(iii).

²¹⁶ S.A. 1911-1912, c. 2, ss. 15, 72.

²¹⁷ S.A. 1913, c. 23, s. 21.

²¹⁸ Town and Village Act, R.S.A. 1942, c. 150, s. 44, as am. by S.A. 1945, c. 41, s. 4(a); Municipal District Act, R.S.A. 1942, c. 151, s. 133, as am. by S.A. 1945, c. 42, s. 20(a).

²¹⁹ S.A. 1951, c. 9, s. 95.

eligible to become a member of the council a person must be (a) able to speak, read and write English.²²⁰ The language requirement was repealed in 1980.²²¹

A 1951 amendment to the Irrigation Districts Act required that district trustees be “able to read and write in the English language.”²²² This provision apparently continued in force until 1999.²²³

The 1919 Municipal Hospitals Act limited eligibility for election to a hospital board to those “who can read and write the English language.”²²⁴ Although this condition was repealed in 1947,²²⁵ it resurfaced the following year in the Lloydminster Hospital Act.²²⁶

The 1970 School Election Act declared that to be “eligible to become a trustee a person must be (a) able to speak, read and write English or French.”²²⁷ This was repealed in 1983.²²⁸

5. LOCAL ELECTIONS

The 1951 City Act provided that non-English-speaking voters might be assisted by an interpreter: “Where a voter does not understand the English language the deputy returning officer may allow an interpreter to translate the oath as well as any lawful question necessarily put to the voter, and his answers.”²²⁹ The 1957 *Lloydminster Charter*²³⁰ and the 1970 *School Election Act*²³¹ included the same provision. The Local Authorities Election Act continues to permit the use of an interpreter: “If an elector does not understand the English language, the deputy [returning officer] may allow an interpreter to translate the statement as well as any question necessary for the proper purposes of the election put to the elector, and the elector’s answers.”²³²

Currently, in order to vote for a Francophone regional authority, an individual must be “a Francophone” who has “a child who is enrolled in a school operated by the Regional authority.”²³³ The Local Authorities Election Forms Regulation provides sixteen different French language forms for use in these elections.²³⁴

²²⁰ S.A. 1968, c. 66, s. 10.

²²¹ Municipal Election Amendment Act, S.A. 1980, c. 35, s. 5.

²²² R.S.A. 1942, s. 22, as am. by S.A. 1951, c. 45, s. 4(b).

²²³ See Irrigation Districts Act, S.A. 1999, c. I-11, s. 35.

²²⁴ S.A. 1919, c. 8, s. 7(2).

²²⁵ Municipal Hospitals Amendment Act, S.A. 1947, c. 57, s. 7(a), amending S.A. 1929, c. 33, s. 31(1).

²²⁶ S.A. 1948, c. 19, s. 35(4)(b).

²²⁷ S.A. 1970, c. 101, s. 10(a).

²²⁸ Local Authority Election Act, S.A. 1983, c. L-27.5, s. 172.

²²⁹ Supra note 219, s. 168.

²³⁰ Alta. Reg. 296/57, s. 146(1).

²³¹ Supra note 227, s. 96(1).

²³² R.S.A. 2000, c. L-21, s. 72(1). See also Municipal Election Act, supra note 220, s. 107(1).

²³³ School Act, supra note 123, s. 256(1)(a).

²³⁴ Alta. Reg. 234/2000, Schedule 2.

6. MUNICIPAL PROCEEDINGS

The Rural Municipality Act, adopted in 1912, required the municipal secretary to “keep a full and correct record in the English language of the proceedings of every meeting of the council.”²³⁵ On the other hand, the Town and Village Act, as amended in 1936, required the secretary-treasurer to “keep a full and correct record in the English or French language of the proceedings ... provided that, when required the secretary-treasurer shall furnish a certified copy of the records in the English language.”²³⁶ In 1968 a new Municipal Government Act reverted to the earlier English language provision, ordering that the municipal secretary “attend all regular and special meetings of the council and shall in the English language truly record in the minute book, without note or comment, all resolutions, decisions and other proceedings of the council.”²³⁷ In 1994, this responsibility was redefined: “The chief administrative officer must ensure that (a) all minutes of council meetings are recorded in the English language, without note or comment.”²³⁸

E. THE LANGUAGE OF SEMI-PUBLIC AGENCIES

1. COMMUNITY ORGANIZATIONS

For tax exemption purposes a linguistic organization is defined as “an organization formed for the purpose of promoting the use of English or French in Alberta.”²³⁹ By comparison, a much broader definition is given to an ethno-cultural association; that is, “an organization formed for the purpose of serving the interests of a community defined in terms of the racial, cultural, ethnic, national or linguistic origins or interests of its members.”²⁴⁰

2. ALBERTA CULTURAL HERITAGE FOUNDATION

In 1978, the Cultural Development Amendment Act created the Alberta Cultural Heritage Foundation in order “to preserve the cultural wealth of our past including the language, art, music and rites of ethno-cultural groups in Alberta.”²⁴¹

3. REGISTRATION IN A PROFESSION

The Dental Association Act, as amended in 1912, set out the requirements for a license to practice dentistry in Alberta, including an examination offered twice yearly.²⁴² This examination evidently required competence in the English language since, the following year, the Legislature voted to certify Edmonton resident Paul Karrer, “a fully qualified dental surgeon of Russia, Switzerland and the United States of America” who “does not write the ²³⁵ S.A. 1911-1912, c. 3, s. 178(1).

²³⁶ Supra note 218, s. 91(a).

²³⁷ S.A. 1968, c. 68, s. 55(a).

²³⁸ Municipal Government Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. M-26, s. 208(1).

²³⁹ Community Organization Property Tax Exemption Regulation, Alta. Reg. 281/98, s. 13(d).

²⁴⁰ Ibid., s. 13(c).

²⁴¹ S.A. 1978, c. 11, s. 6, amending R.S.A. 1970, c. 82, 10(2).

²⁴² S.A. 1906, c. 22, s. 23, as am. by S.A. 1911-1912, c. 28, s. 8.

English language and therefore cannot comply with the requirements of section 23 of The Dental Association Act.²⁴³

An applicant for registration as a professional member of the engineering, geological or geophysical professions must demonstrate “to the Board of Examiners that the applicant has a proficiency in the English language that is sufficient to enable the applicant to responsibly practice the profession of engineering, geology or geophysics.”²⁴⁴

An applicant for registration as a registered nurse,²⁴⁵ a certified graduate nurse,²⁴⁶ a licensed practical nurse,²⁴⁷ a psychiatric nurse²⁴⁸ or an acupuncturist²⁴⁹ must, similarly, demonstrate a competence in the English language that is sufficient to practice the profession.

A candidate for registration as a medical laboratory technologist “must be sufficiently proficient in the English language to be able to provide professional services in English.”²⁵⁰

An applicant for registration as a pharmacy intern must provide proof “that English is the applicant’s first language, that the applicant has graduated from a training program in pharmacy that was offered in an English-speaking institution or that the applicant is sufficiently fluent in spoken and written English to carry on practice as a pharmacy intern.”²⁵¹

An applicant for registration as a physical therapist, whose first language is not English, must submit “evidence satisfactory to the Registration Committee that the applicant has a comprehension of the English language sufficient to enable him to practice as a physical therapist.”²⁵²

A candidate for registration as registered veterinarian must provide “evidence satisfactory to the [Registration] Committee of his ability to communicate in English.”²⁵³

Applicants for registration as a professional forester or a professional forest technologist, and regulated members applying for permits, may be required to provide information regarding the “language(s) in which the applicant provides professional services.”²⁵⁴

4. PATIENT RECORDS

Acupuncturists must maintain complete patient records “in the English language.”²⁵⁵

-
- ²⁴³ Act to Authorize Paul Karrer to Practice Dentistry, S.A. 1913, c. 48, Preamble.
²⁴⁴ Engineering, Geological and Geophysical Professions General Regulation, Alta. Reg. 150/99, s. 13(d).
²⁴⁵ Nursing Profession Registration Regulation, Alta. Reg. 453/83, s. 2(2)(b).
²⁴⁶ Certified Graduate Nurse Regulation, Alta. Reg. 455/83, s. 2(2)(b).
²⁴⁷ Licensed Practical Nurses Regulation, Alta. Reg. 103/97, s. 2(1)(c).
²⁴⁸ Psychiatric Nurses Regulation, Alta. Reg. 509/87, s. 5(d).
²⁴⁹ Acupuncture Regulation, Alta. Reg. 42/88, s. 2(1)(f).
²⁵⁰ Medical Laboratory Technologists Profession Regulation, Alta. Reg. 255/2001, s. 10(1).
²⁵¹ Pharmaceutical Profession Regulation, Alta. Reg. 322/94, s. 9(4)(b)(vi).
²⁵² Physical Therapy Profession General Regulation, Alta. Reg. 298/85, s. 5(2)(e).
²⁵³ Veterinary Profession General Regulation, Alta. Reg. 44/86, s. 2(f).
²⁵⁴ Registered Professional Foresters Regulation, Alta. Reg. 75/2002, s. 21(1)(vii); Registered Professional Forest Technologists Regulation, Alta. Reg. 76/2002, s. 18(1)(vii).
²⁵⁵ Acupuncture Regulation, Alta. Reg. 42/88, s. 12(1).

5. SOLEMNIZATION OF MARRIAGE

Since 1965, the Marriage Act has provided that “[n]o person shall solemnize a marriage when one or both of the parties do not understand the language in which the marriage ceremony is to be performed unless an interpreter is present to interpret and explain clearly to the party or parties the meaning of the ceremony.”²⁵⁶

F. THE LANGUAGE OF LABOUR RELATIONS

1. BASIC FOUNDATION SKILLS

A basic foundation skills program includes, by definition, a programme of instruction in “English as a second language.”²⁵⁷

2. CERTIFICATION IN A TRADE.

The 1912 Boilers Act permitted a candidate taking the engineering certification exam, but who was “unable to speak the English language,” to employ an interpreter, provided that the interpreter himself was not an engineer.²⁵⁸ Subsequent regulations, however, insisted upon a written examination, except for the fourth class certificate, and specifically prohibited the use of an amanuensis.²⁵⁹ Currently, candidates must successfully complete grade 11 English or equivalent.²⁶⁰

The 1913 Mines Act required that each applicant for a miner’s certificate “satisfy the board that he is able to read and write in the English language.”²⁶¹ In 1930 this requirement was relaxed and a candidate needed only a “sufficient knowledge of the English language to enable him to give and understand working directions and warnings in English.”²⁶² The 1955 Coal Mines Act demanded this same (reduced) level of English proficiency for both the miner’s certificate and the miner’s permit.²⁶³

In 1910, the Alberta Land Surveyors Act required that a person admitted as an articulated pupil to a land surveyor must have previously passed an examination in English grammar.²⁶⁴ A 1949 amendment eliminated the detailed list of prerequisites and, instead, authorized the board of examiners to prescribe the required subjects.²⁶⁵

²⁵⁶ R.S.A. 2000, c. M-5, s. 10(2).

²⁵⁷ Social Allowance Regulation, Alta. Reg. 213/93, s. 28(1)(b).

²⁵⁸ S.A. 1911-1912, c. 9, s. 47(2).

²⁵⁹ Regulations with Respect to Engineers and Firemen, Alta. Reg. 93/57, s. K(c).

²⁶⁰ Engineers Regulations, Alta. Reg. 319/75, ss. 10(4), 11(5).

²⁶¹ S.A. 1913, c. 3, s. 22.

²⁶² Coal Mines Regulation Act, S.A. 1930, c. 24, s. 42(b).

²⁶³ S.A. 1955, c. 35, ss. 72(c), 73(b).

²⁶⁴ S.A. 1910, c. 2, s. 22(1).

²⁶⁵ Alberta Land Surveyors Act, R.S.A. 1942, c. 287, s. 22, as am. by S.A. 1949, c. 9, s. 1.

An applicant seeking admission to an examination for certification as a tool and die maker "shall provide translations into the English language, acceptable to the Director, of credentials in a language other than English."²⁶⁶

3. WORKPLACE REQUIREMENTS

A 1924 amendment to the Boilers Act provided that "[e]very person engaged in the operation of a steam boiler shall speak the same language as the engineer in charge."²⁶⁷ This provision last appeared in 1957, in a slightly revised form: "Every person engaged in the operation of a steam plant subject to these regulations shall speak the same language as the engineer in charge of the shift."²⁶⁸

The Coal Mines Regulations Ordinance, carried over into Alberta from the North-West Territories, ordered that "[n]o person unable to speak and read English shall be appointed to or shall occupy any position of trust or responsibility."²⁶⁹ When the province adopted its own Coal Mines Regulation Act in 1930, this provision was no longer included.²⁷⁰

4. EMPLOYMENT RECORDS

In 1936 the Male Minimum Wage Act required that "[e]very employer shall keep in his principal place of business in the Province a true and correct record in the English language of the wages paid to and the hours worked each day by each of his employees, together with a register in the English language of the names, nationalities, ages and residential addresses of all his employees."²⁷¹ This same requirement also appeared in the 1936 *Hours of Work Act*²⁷² and the 1947 Alberta Labour Act.²⁷³

G. THE LANGUAGE OF COMMERCE AND BUSINESS

1. COMMERCIAL SIGNS

A 1917 statute requiring the City of Calgary to adopt an early closing policy also ordered that exempted shops "expose in two prominent places in the front door, and in the front window a card not less than two feet square on which there shall be printed in English, in type of not less than one inch high, the following words only: 'This shop is closed by law, except for the sale of (here state the goods, or any of them, mentioned in this ²⁶⁶ Tool and Die Maker Trade Regulation, Alta. Reg. 346/84, s. 4(4).

²⁶⁷ R.S.A. 1922, c. 191, s. 52, as am. by S.A. 1924, c. 3, s. 38(f).

²⁶⁸ Regulations with Respect to Engineers and Firemen, Alta. Reg. 93/57, s. R(a).

²⁶⁹ Coal Mines Regulations Ordinance, C.O.N.W.T. 1905, c. 16, r. 34.

²⁷⁰ Supra note 262.

²⁷¹ S.A. 1936, c. 76, s. 14(1).

²⁷² S.A. 1936, c. 5, s. 13(1).

²⁷³ S.A. 1947, c. 8, s. 10(1).

subsection).²⁷⁴ In 1923 the same provision was applied to the City of Edmonton²⁷⁵ and in 1951 to all Alberta cities, although the English-language sign was now to be “not less than twenty-two inches by twenty-eight inches.”²⁷⁶ The provision was repealed in 1968.²⁷⁷

2. COMPANY REGISTRATION

The 1929 Companies Act advised foreign companies that “[w]here any document required to be filed under this section is not in the English language, the Registrar may require a translation thereof, notarially certified.”²⁷⁸ A 1968 amendment extended this provision to “extra-provincial” companies.²⁷⁹ It currently reads: “If all or any part of the charter is not in the English language, the Registrar may require the submission to the Registrar of a translation of the charter or that part of the charter, verified in a manner satisfactory to the Registrar, before the Registrar registers the extra-provincial corporation.”²⁸⁰ The Cooperatives Act includes an equivalent provision.²⁸¹

3. CORPORATE NAMES

According to the Interpretation Act, a corporation that has “a name consisting of an English and French form or a combined English and French form” is vested with the power “to use either the English or French form of its name or both forms.”²⁸² The Business Corporations Act similarly recognizes that the name of a corporation “may be in an English form or a French form or in a combined English and French form and the corporation may use and may be legally designated by any of those forms.”²⁸³ The Cooperatives Act,²⁸⁴ the Insurance Act,²⁸⁵ and the Loan and Trust Corporations Act,²⁸⁶ all include similar provisions.

An Alberta registered corporation, cooperative or society may include in its name any letter of the English language alphabet, any Arabic numeral and any of twenty-three listed marks and symbols.²⁸⁷ On the other hand, a credit union or a loan and trust corporation is permitted the “letters of the alphabet used in the English or French language” as well as ²⁷⁴ Act to amend the Acts and Ordinances constituting the Charter of the City of Calgary, and to validate Certain By-laws of the said city, S.A. 1917, c. 45, s. 19(4) [emphasis in original].

²⁷⁵ Act to amend the Acts constituting The Edmonton Charter and to validate By-law No. 2, 1923, of the City of Edmonton, S.A. 1923, c. 63, s. 6. See also An Act to Amend the Acts Constituting The Edmonton Charter and to Validate Certain By-laws Authorizing the Borrowing of Money, S. A, 1939, c. 102, s. 4.

²⁷⁶ City Act, supra note 219, s. 381.

²⁷⁷ Municipal Government Act, supra note 237, s. 433.

²⁷⁸ S.A. 1929, c. 14, s. 135(3)(c).

²⁷⁹ An Act to amend the Companies Act, S.A. 1968, c. 13, 2(2), amending R.S.A. 1955, c. 53, s. 148(5).

²⁸⁰ Business Corporations Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. B-9, s. 280(3).

²⁸¹ S.A. 2001, c. 28-1, s. 369(3).

²⁸² R.S.A. 2000, c. I-8, s. 16(e).

²⁸³ Supra note 280, s. 10(6).

²⁸⁴ Supra note 281, s. 16(2).

²⁸⁵ R.S.A. 2000, c. I-3, s. 21(2).

²⁸⁶ R.S.A. 2000, c. L-20, ss. 20(2), 34(3).

²⁸⁷ Business Corporations Regulation, Alta. Reg. 118/2000, s. 11(1); Cooperatives Regulation, Alta. Reg. 55/2002, s. 10(1); Societies Regulation, Alta. Reg. 122/2000, s. 10(1).

“punctuation marks, symbols or other marks in common usage in the English or French language.”²⁸⁸

Corporations must include, as the last part of their name, one of a select number of English or French words, or abbreviations: “Limited,” “Limité,” “Incorporated,” “Incorporé,” “Corporation,” “Ltd.,” “Lté,” “Inc.,” or “Corp.”²⁸⁹ Similarly, cooperatives must include an appropriate English or French word (such as “cooperative,” “co-operative” or “coopérative”) in their names,²⁹⁰ as must trust companies (“trust” or “fiducie”).²⁹¹ Only an incorporated insurance company may use the words “insurance company” or “insurance corporation” or “the French equivalents of those words” in its name.²⁹²

The Business Corporations Act declares that “a corporation may, outside Canada, use and may be legally designated by a name in any language form.”²⁹³

4. COMPANY REPORTS

The 1929 Companies Act required that all public companies file an annual report, including an audited balance sheet, “and if any such balance sheet is in a foreign language, there shall also be annexed to it a translation thereof in English, certified in the prescribed manner to be a correct translation.”²⁹⁴ The phrase “not in English” now replaces “in a foreign language.”²⁹⁵

5. WILLS

In 1976 Alberta enacted the rules regarding the so-called “international will,” providing that a will “may be written in any language, by hand or by any other means.”²⁹⁶ Nevertheless, when proving the signing of a will, Alberta’s Surrogate Rules require that “[i]f a will is written in a language other than English, the applicant must give an affidavit in Form NC 10 verifying the will’s translation into English.”²⁹⁷ Further, if the deceased “did not fully understand English” at the time the will was made, the applicant must satisfy the court that the deceased appeared to fully understand the will.²⁹⁸

²⁸⁸ Credit Union (Ministerial) Regulation, Alta. Reg. 250/89, s. 6(1); Loan and Trust Corporations (Ministerial) Regulation, Alta. Reg. 172/92, s. 6(1)(a).

²⁸⁹ Business Corporations Act, supra note 280, s. 10(1).

²⁹⁰ Cooperatives Act, supra note 281, s. 16(2).

²⁹¹ Loan and Trust Corporations Act, supra note 286, s. 20(1)(e).

²⁹² Insurance Act, supra note 285, s. 213.

²⁹³ Supra note 280, s. 280(3).

²⁹⁴ S.A. 1929, c. 14, s. 117(3).

²⁹⁵ Companies Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. C-21, s. 162(3).

²⁹⁶ Attorney General Statutes Amendment Act, S.A. 1976, c. 57, Schedule, Annex, s. 3(3). See also Wills Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. W-12, Schedule, Annex, s. 3(3).

²⁹⁷ Alta. Reg. 130/95, s. 18.

²⁹⁸ Ibid., s. 17.

H. THE LANGUAGE OF INSTRUCTION

1. INSTRUCTION IN ENGLISH

The North-West Territories' School Ordinance recognized English as the sole language of instruction: "All schools shall be taught in the English language but it shall be permissible for the board of any district to cause a primary course to be taught in the French language."²⁹⁹ The 1988 School Act repealed this obligation, and replaced it with an entitlement: "Every student is entitled to receive school instruction in English."³⁰⁰

2. INSTRUCTION IN FRENCH

The North-West Territories' School Ordinance permitted the teaching of a primary course in the French language.³⁰¹ A 1964 amendment, however, provided for French language instruction "in grades one to nine inclusive but in that case (a) in grades one and two, at least one hour a day shall be devoted to instruction in English, (b) in grade three, not more than two hours a day shall be devoted to instruction in French, and (c) in grades above grade three, not more than one hour a day shall be devoted to instruction in French."³⁰² Four years later a further amendment permitted French language instruction, in grades three through twelve, for up to "50 percent of the total period of time devoted to classroom instruction each day."³⁰³ In 1976 the Minister of Education effectively increased the French language allowance to 80 percent of class time by reducing the English minimums.³⁰⁴

In 1989 the Minister of Education formally recognized French immersion as a program distinct from Francophone education, although both had the same hourly minimums for English language instruction.³⁰⁵ A decade later he repealed both the *French Language Immersion Regulation*³⁰⁶ and the French Language Regulation.³⁰⁷

3. INSTRUCTION IN OTHER LANGUAGES

The North-West Territories' School Ordinance permitted instruction in a language other than English (or French), but this could only be done after normal school hours and at the parents' expense.³⁰⁸ However, in 1971 an amendment provided that a "board may authorize (a) that French be used as a language of instruction, or (b) that any other language be used as a language of instruction, in addition to the English language, in all or any of its schools."³⁰⁹ In 1979 the Minister of Education ruled that in such cases the board was required to "ensure that English is used as the language of instruction for not less than 50% per day

²⁹⁹ Supra note 84, s. 136.

³⁰⁰ S.A. 1988, c. S-3.1, s. 4. See also School Act, R.S.A. 2000, c. S-3, s. 9.

³⁰¹ Supra note 84.

³⁰² School Amendment Act, 1964, supra note 98, s. 43, amending R.S.A. 1955, c. 297, s. 386.

³⁰³ School Amendment Act, 1968, supra note 101, s. 24, amending R.S.A. 1955, c. 297, s. 386.

³⁰⁴ French Language Regulations, supra note 107, s. 2.

³⁰⁵ French Language Immersion Regulation, Alta. Reg. 36/89.

³⁰⁶ Education Repeal Regulation, Alta. Reg. 157/98.

³⁰⁷ Repeal Regulation, Alta. Reg. 222/99.

³⁰⁸ Supra note 84, s. 136(2), (3).

³⁰⁹ School Amendment Act, 1971, supra note 102, s. 18, amending R.S.A. 1970, c. 329, s. 150.

for each pupil."³¹⁰ This Regulation was repealed in 1998.³¹¹ The School Act now declares, quite simply, that a "board may authorize the use of French or any other language as a language of instruction."³¹²

IV. CONCLUSION

Fundamental importance notwithstanding, Alberta's language provisions have been widely ignored. Indeed, many still believe that Alberta has seldom legislated language use. This misperception is rooted in a neo-liberal ideology. (Would a supposedly non-interventionist government regulate its citizens' speech?) It is nourished by a discriminatory social impact. (Does the English-speaking majority care about measures that affect only a small linguistic minority?) It is maintained by ad hoc scattergun law-making. (Who will pick out the incidental provisions buried in a huge cauldron of legislation?)

This article has uncovered an extensive body of language law buried in a century of statutory and regulatory provisions. (And it may have only scratched the surface with respect to orders-in-council and regulations.) During the first several decades, Alberta legislated to ensure the use of English in a wide variety of domains, including government, justice, education, business and commerce. This legislative effort is impressive but troubling, given the longstanding and seemingly unthreatened status of the English language. Pierre Coulombe makes the point:

The rationale for limiting language rights outside Québec is assimilation to the English majority on grounds of cost-efficiency and/or cultural imperialism, for which there could be no valid justification. What I want to emphasize is that the situation is different outside Québec: different of course because communal rights for French Canadians are a question of survival, making their violation all the more morally reprehensible, but different also because their violation is a case of plain repression against French-Canadian minorities rather than the result of the exercise of some communal English-Canadian right.³¹³

In recent years, Alberta has exhibited a greater tolerance for the French language and for other minority languages, particularly in education. Prohibition has turned to acceptance. Judicial activism has created a growing system of French language schools, governed by French language school boards. Economic globalization has contributed to an increasing presence of French language corporate names, atop French language multinationals. Social development has encouraged a greater tolerance for French language communication in public institutions, including the legislature and the courts. Unfortunately, after decades of repressive language provisions, proportionately few non-English-speakers have survived to benefit from these changes.

³¹⁰ Instruction in a Language other than English or French Regulation, Alta. Reg. 74/79, s. 2(1).

³¹¹ Education Repeal Regulation, supra note 307.

³¹² Supra note 123, s. 11(1).

³¹³ Pierre A. Coulombe, Language Rights in French Canada (New York: Peter Lang, 1997) at 129.