Course description

This course covers political and social changes in the recent history of Italy, focusing on current political life and society. A general historical introduction is provided. The first part of the course will examine Italian politics and society under the so called First Republic, with specific attention to the legacy of the “Cold War”, the transition to the Second Republic, and the current Grand Coalition Cabinet. Emphasis will be placed on the social and political background of Berlusconi’s rise and, more in general, of the populist movements of the last twenty years. The course includes also an analysis of the following topics: the position of Italy in the European Community and the role of the Catholic Church – basically its influence on the social habits and more in general on Italian Politics. The last part of the course will point out the economic and social gap between the North and the South of the country, the transformation of the patriarchal family and the impact of feminism on Italian society. The course will pay particular attention to the social and political roots of organized crime (Mafia and Camorra), focusing on its interaction with the politics both at local and at national level, and to the transformation of Italy into a country of immigration.

The class format includes lectures, discussion, presentations, and audiovisual materials.

To communicate student achievement, the U of A uses a letter grading system with a 4-point scale of numerical equivalents. In accordance with the University guidelines, a student’s final grade will be communicated as a letter grade and will be based on absolute achievement and relative performance in class. While instructors may use percentages in calculating grades, percentages are not part of the University’s grading system. While percentages vary between Faculties, the School in Cortona uses the following conversion table. For a detailed explanation of the grading system, see section 23.4 in the University Calendar (www.registrar.ualberta.ca/calendar).

Attendance Policy

Attendance to all classes is essential and mandatory. Attendance to discussions and visits during field trip is also mandatory, and will be an essential part for the individual evaluation.

In courses which meet twice per week, students may not have more than four absences.

Students are expected to treat with maturity attendance and punctuality regulations for all components of the course. No excuse for absence will exempt a student from the completion of all work in a course. The student assumes the responsibility for requesting assistance from faculty members for making up missed work.

N.B: The instructor reserves the right to modify meeting times, places and the monuments visited when and if necessary for the educational benefit of the class or due to constraints imposed by unforeseen circumstances. Communication about such changes will be effected via group email messages or verbally in class prior to the date of the affected class. It is the individual student’s responsibility to stay informed of any such changes.

Class Participation

Students are expected to actively participate and contribute to class discussion. Participation grade requires more preparation and contribution, and if a student is not in class he/she is not contributing or receiving the inputs of his/her classmates and teacher. Class participation will be evaluated on the basis of:
