COMMUNITY SERVICE-LEARNING (CSL)
uab.ca/CSL

WHAT IS CSL?
Community Service-Learning (CSL) makes learning come alive by linking academic coursework to community-based experiences. Students bring their time and talents to community organizations as part of their studies, challenging them to engage with their learning in fresh new ways and to explore relationships between theory and practice.

HOW DOES CSL WORK?
CSL is integrated into a course through an ongoing and collaborative process. Community partners describe their volunteer and research needs to us, and instructors design their course projects and goals to integrate these community-based experiences into the course curriculum for students.

What are the benefits of CSL?
Students develop personal, critical thinking and problem solving skills; enhance skills in communication, collaboration and leadership; increase understanding of course material and learn to apply course material to new situations; gain hands-on experience in the not-for-profit sector; and learn more about social issues and their root causes.

STUDY ABROAD
uab.ca/artsgo

Whatever your interests or goals, we have a study abroad program for you. Learn Chinese in Harbin. Be a policy intern in Washington, D.C. Get your hands dirty on a dig in Greece. Give your design skills a try in Berlin. Test out your French skills in France. Escape winter for a year and go to Australia for a semester!

Earn academic credits while experiencing the world! We have agreements with universities worldwide, as well as our school in Cortona, Italy, offering you countless opportunities on a global level.

More than two-thirds of our study abroad students receive funding to help them study abroad.

Students can now study at Cortona in their FIRST year!

THE ARTS COMMITMENT TO INDIGENOUS STUDENTS:

The Faculty of Arts is a diverse faculty that has a strong commitment to Indigenous students, research, teaching and learning, community engagement and language revitalization. Arts supports Indigenous initiatives and is dedicated to hiring and promoting Indigenous scholars, including recent Indigenous professors in several of our departments.

The University of Alberta has more than 1500 Indigenous students with more than 300 in the Faculty of Arts making Arts the second largest Indigenous student community on campus.

DESIGNATED STUDENT SPACE FOR ARTS INDIGENOUS STUDENTS

Located at 4-65 Humanities Centre, the Faculty of Arts has a student space dedicated to the Arts Indigenous community. Whether it’s to meet with friends, have your lunch or read a book, this student space is a welcoming and cozy spot for Arts Indigenous students to relax between classes.

INDIGENOUS RECRUITMENT AND ENGAGEMENT SPECIALIST

Another initiative of the Faculty of Arts is a dedicated support person for the Arts Indigenous students. This position can help ease the transition to university, provide academic advising, and host engagement activities. The Indigenous Recruitment and Engagement Specialist is a unique position within the Faculty of Arts Undergraduate Student Services office and has access to many resources available to students across campus.

Social Sciences

Courses in the social sciences examine institutions and the functioning of human society. They explore politics, economics, social interactions, psychology and more.

Humanities

Explore human-constructed concepts such as language, philosophy and religion. Humanities courses look at everything from the ancient world to the modern representation of human culture through film.

Fine Arts

Delve into the visual and performing arts with courses that deal with everything from art history and acting to printmaking and world music.
STUDY HONORS IN ARTS

Are you interested in challenging yourself with independent study? Can you see yourself working closely with faculty mentors and connecting with peers who have similar academic interests and passions? Do you want to gain research experience for graduate studies or develop your writing and research skills for a professional career?

If you are an academically strong student, then a Faculty of Arts Honors program may be right for you! Interested in two different disciplines? Consider a combined Honors program.

Our Honors programs in the Faculty of Arts offer the most academically challenging and enriching undergraduate experiences. Programs are available in every department.

PHILOSOPHY
philosophy.ualberta.ca

Philosophy is the critical study of ideas, experiences, and meaning. Philosophy is devoted to rational inquiry itself, rather than memorizing facts and received theories. Whether your inclinations are those of a mathematician, poet, scholar, or an activist, there is certain to be an area of philosophy that will grab your interest. Along the way, philosophy majors acquire a unique skill set and are exposed to national and international conferences that are hosted at the University of Alberta.

EXAMPLES OF COURSES
- Philosophy of Mind
- Risk, Choice and Rationality
- Symbolic Logic

POSSIBLE CAREERS: Editor, Filmmaker, Politician, Lawyer

Never give in to ordinary.
MEDIA AND TECHNOLOGY STUDIES

MEDIA STUDIES
ualberta.ca/media-technology-studies

Students who major in Media Studies will learn how to navigate, analyze and critically evaluate today’s global media landscape. The core Media Studies courses introduce students to media theories and the history of various media -- from Gutenberg’s printing press to Zuckerberg’s Facebook empire; from computer gaming and reality tv to fake news on Instagram. Topics also include the cultural, political and social contexts within which producers and users operate.

PROGRAM GUIDE

SCIENCE, TECHNOLOGY & SOCIETY
ualberta.ca/media-technology-studies

We explore the role and impact of scientific and technological developments on human societies past, present and future. Our program helps you to think critically about how social, political, and cultural values affect technological innovation and scientific research, and how research and innovations affect human life.
