this issue

As with every issue, as I sit down to write the editor's message at the very end of the process, I am in AWE of our alumni, faculty, and students, both men and women, who have made such an impact locally, provincially, nationally, and internationally. But in particular with this issue, my fellow female alumni and their wide-ranging entrepreneurial endeavours are those I would like to highlight.

I begin with Tracey Scarlett, '02 MBA, and the CEO of AWE, Alberta Women Entrepreneurs, who made finding an inspiration for a title for the cover so much easier as did the newest board member of GAP International, Katherine Tsang, '78 BCom. In AWE of Women, Closing the GAP - get it? ©

And, yes indeed, women continue to close the gap and make an impact in all walks of life. Women such as Mary Phillips-Rickey, '77 BCom, and Susan Gallacher,

'84 BCom, who both received U of A Alumni Awards recognizing significant contributions in their local communities and beyond; Jane Halford, '94 BCom, CEO of ICAA and incoming President of the U of A Alumni Association; Karina Birch, '99 BCom, co-owner of Rocky Mountain Soap Company and recipient of the 2010 Henry Singer Alumni Award for Retailing Excellence; and Amanda Babichuk, '01 BCom, Catherine Vu, '01 BCom, and Kristina Williams, '05 MBA, who are three of Avenue Magazine's Top 40 under 40.

And then there is our part-time MBA student, Lisa Hryniw, who not only ran the Athens Marathon with little training but is one of our four-member team of women selected as a team finalist in Jim Collin's Net Impact global competition. Their inspiration? Helping to find a cure for juvenile arthritis suffered by Lisa's daughter Maggie.

For Maggie, for Lisa, for all, may 2011 be a year of health, hope, and humanity.

• • • TRACEY SCARLETT

She credits the Alberta School of Business with giving her the opportunity to transform her professional life, but dig a little deeper and you'll discover that the roots of her entrepreneurial spirit are planted firmly in a Grande Prairie barn. That's where, in the 1980s, her younger sister, Colleen, began raising a calf as part of a 4H project. After a year, she sold the calf for $2,500.

That education landed her where she is now: CEO of Alberta Women Entrepreneurs (AWE). The non-profit association, which is supported by Western Economic Diversification Canada, helps women to start and grow their own businesses. In the 15 years that it has existed across Alberta, it has helped thousands of women launch careers ranging from operating personal and business services to running retail shops.

Working in an estrogen-fuelled environment was the last thing Tracey had in mind when she signed up for the Technology Commercialization MBA program in the late 1990s.

“I didn’t come from a background where I thought my gender was ever an issue, she says. I knew that doing the MBA would allow me to change directions and leverage my prior experience into a different role. I thought it would still be in the biotech industry.”

Biotech was where Tracey began her career after earning a diploma in medical laboratory technology from NAIT in 1987. During the next 20 years, she worked her way up from testing blood for infectious diseases at the Red Cross to handling regulatory approvals and plant licensing and dealing with international pharmaceutical companies for the Alberta Research Council.

While working, she went to school part time at the U of A, earning a BSc in Medical Lab Science in 1997. Shortly before beginning the MBA program, she and her then-husband started an electrical contracting company in Edmonton, which they grew to a couple of million dollars in annual revenue and eventually exited in 2004.

Helping to build a company while studying for an MBA proved invaluable: not only did Tracey have a real-life lab in which to test out the theories she was learning in the classroom, but, because she had plenty of experience, she was able to do an academic internship instead of one in the corporate world.

IMPRESSED AND MOTIVATED BY THE IDEA OF MAKING MONEY, TRACEY JOINED 4H AND FOLLOWED IN HER SISTER’S FOOTSTEPS.

BY THE TIME SHE’D FINISHED HIGH SCHOOL, SHE’D RAISED AND SOLD THREE CALVES. SHE USED THE MONEY TO PAY FOR EXTRACURRICULAR SPORTS AND, EVENTUALLY, HER EDUCATION.

It was while working with Professor Ted Heidrick on a literature review for Industry Canada about access to capital that Tracey learned about AWE. She thought the organization was terrific, and she joined the Board of Directors, never imagining that some day she would be running the show. And indeed, it didn’t happen right away. During her first few post-MBA years, she ran a consulting business, developed a policy document for BioAlberta, and served as COO for KMT Hepatech, a U of A spinoff company founded by Dr. Lorne Tyrrell, Dr. David Mercer, and Dr. Norman Kneteman that was working with international pharmaceutical companies to develop a Hepatitis C vaccine.

As much as Tracey enjoyed biotech, the work confirmed her suspicion that the industry wasn’t for her. If you’re looking for an explanation, look no further than her introduction to the business world in that Grande Prairie barn: she had a calf, she fed it, it got fat, and she sold it. A-plus-B-equals-C. That’s not the case in biotech where companies can pour significant sums of money and years of research into products that will never make it to the market place.

ALUMNI profile

WHAT I FOUND FRUSTRATING ABOUT THAT WORLD WAS THE LIFE CYCLE IN TERMS OF DEVELOPMENT, SHE SAYS. I LIKED BEING INVOLVED IN BUSINESS THAT HAD A MORE CLEAR PATH TO COMMERCIAL SUCCESS.

That's definitely the case at AWE whose 12 employees include advisors who work one-on-one with entrepreneurs to help develop a business plan and navigate financing and loan administrators and managers who oversee the agency's $5 million revolving loan program.

In addition to providing business loans of up to $150,000, AWE offers programs to help entrepreneurs connect to the resources they need including access to large supply chains in companies such as Wal-Mart. AWE also acts as an agent: it's not unusual for major corporations to come calling, looking for specific suppliers.

Tracey has made it her mandate to expand AWE's profile to focus on economic development and create "more productive, more impactful companies", which is something that is increasingly important given the number of professionally educated women who are steering themselves away from traditional jobs into self-employment.

TRACEY, PREMIER ED STELMACH, AND HIS WIFE MARIE AT ALBERTA WOMEN ENTREPRENEURS' OPENING RECEPTION FOR INNOVATIVE APPROACHES TO SUCCESS 2010 CONFERENCE.

"The biggest group of entrepreneurs we see coming through our doors are mid-career, professionally educated women, she says. About half are under 35 and half are between 35 and 45, and they have professional careers yet there is something about that environment that is not allowing them the creativity or control over their futures they are seeking. So they're opting out and looking at, can I translate this into a business opportunity?"

As someone who has done just that, Tracey is in an excellent position to mentor others, and she does, not just at AWE, but also in a number of volunteer positions including the U of A MBA program, the TEC Venture Prize, and as a judge for the RBC Canadian Women Entrepreneur of the Year Awards.

Giving aspiring businesswomen the tools to succeed doesn't feel like work to Tracey. IT REALLY IS A GREAT FIT FOR WHO I AM AND AT THIS STAGE OF MY LIFE, SHE SAYS. I FEEL LIKE THERE'S SO MUCH I CAN DO WITHIN THIS PORTFOLIO. I'VE ONLY STARTED SCRATCHING THE SURFACE OF WHAT IS POSSIBLE.

TRACEY AND W. BRETT WILSON, CLOSING KEYNOTE SPEAKER AT AWE'S INNOVATIVE APPROACHES TO SUCCESS 2010 CONFERENCE.

Tracey . . . DIANA Jennifer, Karen, and Jacqueline

DIANA International is a global network of researchers from over 20 countries who are committed to advancing knowledge about women's entrepreneurship and high-growth ventures. To date, DIANA has hosted five international research events including Stockholm, Madrid, and Belfast and generated six books. Together with the Babson School, the Alberta School of Business was pleased to host the 2010 DIANA International Research Conference on Women's Entrepreneurship in Banff in August 2010 where over 50 papers were presented to more than 80 participants from around the world.

Tracey Scarlett was one of those participants with her presentation entitled: Women's Enterprise Initiative: Generating Significant Economic Impacts in Western Canada Conference Co-chairs were Alberta School of Business professors Jennifer Jennings and Karen Hughes.

Jennifer, Karen, and Jacqueline

CONFERENCE ASSISTANT WAS BACHELOR OF COMMERCE STUDENT JACQUELINE SOLC WHO SHARES ON BOTH HER CONFERENCE EXPERIENCE AND HER EXCHANGE OPPORTUNITY TO DENMARK.

"The most important take away from this experience was the idea that women entrepreneurs, worldwide, face many of the same barriers. It was so inspiring to see researchers from around the world working together and discussing issues present in their home countries. In addition to this, it was inspiring to see my professors "in action." Not only were they extremely successful in organizing the conference and leading discussions among the delegates, but it was also clear that they are greatly respected by the other delegates, and their work is well recognized."

"Overall, this was an experience that I will never forget! Working with my two professors and successfully organizing an international conference in a field of study that I am very interested in was a very beneficial experience. I am lucky to have seen my professors in action and can now truly appreciate the level of talent and expertise that the professors at the University of Alberta have."

DENMARK DECEMBER 2010

"With only a couple of weeks left in my exchange in Denmark, and my undergraduate degree for that matter, it is a nice time to reflect on the impact that doing an international exchange has had on my university career. I have been fortunate enough to have the opportunity to do two international exchanges during my time at the University of Alberta; the first to Lille, France, and the second here in Copenhagen, Denmark. What comes to mind every time I think about my time abroad is the level of personal growth that I have experienced. This does not only include the number of countries that I have travelled to, but, more importantly, being abroad has allowed me to learn a lot more about the Canadian culture and to understand my own culture. It is not until you are surrounded by different nationalities and cultures that you can begin to understand why you do things in a certain way and how different it can be somewhere else. This growth really helps to shape individuals and should be seen as a very beneficial learning experience and one that cannot be taught in a classroom. My time abroad has allowed me to have a better understanding of my strengths and my future goals, and I know that the confidence and independence that I have gained through these experiences will help guide me in my future endeavours."

ON NOVEMBER 9, Katherine Tsang '78 BCom, Chairperson for Greater China at Standard Chartered Bank, a leading United Kingdom-based international bank, and newest GAP board member, would once again travel from Hong Kong to San Francisco to attend her third board meeting in less than three months.

ON NOVEMBER 10, Katherine would return to her alma mater for the first time in 32 years to give the Eldon Foote Lecture in International Business entitled "Playing it right in China: Navigating Asia's New Business Landscape."

ON NOVEMBER 11, GAP Inc., operator of more than 3,000 clothing shops, would open its first store in China and begin on-line sales to tap the country's almost 400 million Internet users.

EXCERPTS FROM HER LECTURE FOLLOW:

CHINA - KNOW IT RIGHT

Modernization underpinned by pragmatism

China has always been a pragmatic versus a social entity. As China pursues its course of modernization, it is not dogmatic but flexible and pragmatic in its choice of means.

Feasibility as determined by controllability

Chinese history-civil wars, invasion, revolutions-sets the tone for many aspects of China's policy making: the overarching concern for stability, hence what is feasible is determined by whether its outcome is controllable.

Centralism and federalism – We need to know that China is a centralized yet diverse country. Although the Central government has a final say on many important policy matters, the devil is in the details of how those policies are being interpreted and implemented locally. China is never a unitary or single market.

CHINA - POSITION OURSELVES RIGHT

The key to doing business in China is to see what China needs now and to have the foresight to predict what she will need in the future. Among all the banks in the world, including the Chinese banks, I can quite proudly say that Standard Chartered is in a leadership position in RMB trade and capital markets products globally. We positioned ourselves early. We smelled that China had the ambition to internationalize its currency early last year so we quickly geared ourselves up to form an international taskforce to analyze the different options open for China. We wrote five large analysis papers including the one we just sent a month ago and worked on removing our international operational hurdles to prepare for this opportunity. As a result, we were the first bank to be awarded the Settlement and Agency License in Shanghai after they had piloted their first initiative with two appointed local banks.

CHINA – PLAY IT RIGHT

Build your local teams – Having a local team to support your long-term ambitions is essential. No one can know China better than the locals and the possession of local knowledge and expertise is critical to our growth and success. As a human resources professional before taking on my role as a country manager, I am always conscious of the need to groom local talents and create headroom for their professional advancement.

Manage your expectations – China is a long game. It requires a lot of patience and perseverance on top of investment in effort and money for one to see returns. The banking industry is heavily regulated and foreign banks do not receive equal treatment. Regulations are constantly evolving and we faced as many as one new regulation or regulatory change every 1.2 days in 2010. Since it is a very crowded market space with 76 foreign banks having a combined 2 percent share of the total banking industry, we are there for the long term but not immediate gains.

EXCERPTS FROM THE MBA FORUM FOLLOW:

SERENDIPITOUS

Looking back there were some major turning points in my life and one of them was my time in Edmonton. It was serendipitous. I had no choice but to come. I hadn't done well at school. My mother had just passed away and three (of my five) brothers were already studying at the University of Alberta. I arrived as a 16-year old at Strathcona High School and worked as a waitress at Newton Place Pizza and marker for a mathematics professor during University to help support myself.

PUBLIC SERVICE

I know what growing up with boys is like, being the youngest of six children with five older brothers, and living with an additional four cousins, three of whom were boys. This gave me good training to operate in a male-dominated world.

Education and public service meant a great deal to my family that is proud third generation in Hong Kong. My father, Tsang Wan, was a police sergeant and, after my mother passed away, my two eldest brothers remained in Hong Kong to support the rest of us. Both followed in my Dad's footsteps of public service in Hong Kong. I am very proud of their achievements given our humble background. For the four of us who were lucky enough to go to Canada to pursue our tertiary education, we are all very grateful for the education we received at the U of A.

Donald Tsang – Chief Executive of Hong Kong since 2005

Ashley YP Tsang – Retired Commissioner of Hong Kong Police and current Executive Director of New World Development Company

Norman Tsang – Co-founder of Vancouver - based Phase-Technology, received his Computer Science degree at the U of A.

Adrian Tsang – Professor in Biology at Concordia University, received his undergrad Biology degree at the U of A.

Charles Tsang – Co-founder of Vancouver - based Phase-Technology, received his undergrad Biology and Chemical Engineering degrees at the U of A. He also married Christina Law, '78 BCom.

CAREER

Given how homesick I was, I finished my degree in three years and returned to Hong Kong joining Coopers and Lybrand as an articling student. I soon realized accounting wasn't for me and then joined the civil service for six years eventually finding my niche in human resources. I then went into the private sector eventually joining Standard Bank in 1992.

I lived in Shanghai for five years where I was responsible for the Bank's operation in China. It was during this period that China grew the fastest, opening up to foreign banks participation with widest latitudes. Today, I am responsible for the strategic relationships and for the governance of the three subsidiary boards of the Greater China Region of Standard Chartered Bank. I am fortunate to have experience in both Shanghai, the financial centre for China, and Hong Kong. I see a distinct role for both Hong Kong and Shanghai until at least 2020.

UNPRETENTIOUS

The majority of my career was in human resources where I saw many people from the very top schools. In my mind, the U of A stands strong and stands for what I value most – an unpretentious, encouraging, accommodating place. I remember the atmosphere, the ambience, the excitement, which resonated again with me today. I was very lucky to find a place that allowed me to learn and explore.

ON NOVEMBER 29,
Katherine wrote: The trip to Edmonton has been the highlight of my 2010.
Very emotional and most rewarding.

ALFRED SORENSEN – INSPIRATION-IN-RESIDENCE

By Nella Sabo

Alfred Sorensen, '83 BCom, arrived at the Alberta School of Business on the last Monday of October, less than 24 hours after completing the Army Ten Miler in Washington, DC. Alfred had made fast friends with fellow runner during a recent marathon in France that resulted in a race invitation and a quick stop-over in Washington prior to returning to his alma mater for a two-week Executive-in-Residence visit.

Alfred's ability to connect with people and easily build relationships extends beyond the world of running and could be seen in the way students felt comfortable approaching him in the hallway for advice on their latest business idea or the wide range of topics covered in his engaging discussions with faculty members. From negotiations to new venture financing to energy project development, Alfred's lecture topics, derived from his diverse and successful past, proved to capture his audiences - from undergraduate to executive MBA students.

A significant part of this intrigue may have been Alfred's innovative approach to talking about his recent involvement with Kitimat LNG Terminal (a liquefied natural gas export terminal on the west coast of BC). Alfred's originality in his presentations included a re-enactment of the actual pitch he did for investors while trying to raise capital for the Kitimat project to Dr. Andrew Leach's Energy and Environment class.

Beyond the classroom, Alfred was very generous with his time and attended the Business Alumni Association Dinner where he reconnected with some old friends and had the chance to listen to guest speaker for the evening: Mr. Gerry Protti. Alfred also made the time to connect with students in more informal settings outside of the classroom so they could ask him questions one-on-one that otherwise they would not have the chance to ask.

After hearing Alfred, one MBA student said that listening to Alfred speak was a strong reminder as to the whole reason he decided to come back and do his MBA – his mind was “fizzling with ideas” after listening to him and he was reminded as to the calibre and level of success of the School's alumni. A perfect inspiration for today's students and future business leaders.

MBA CLASS OF '85

By Ross Bradford

After 25 years, it was amazing how young everyone still looked! Classmates came from different parts of the country - Calgary, Toronto, Ottawa - and even good old Edmonton; members of the MBA Class of 85 reassembled and immediately began complimenting one another for how good we all looked. On Friday evening, some hard core music lovers gathered at the Yardbird Suite to have cocktails and listen to some jazz performed by the Matt Newton Quartet from Toronto.

On Saturday, more classmates joined us at the Alberta School of Business for brunch (pictured below) are a few photo shoots taken in the Japanese Garden on the 5th floor (the paparazzi loved us). We all noted the Garden did not exist in 1985 nor, for that matter, was there any such thing as a "smart classroom" back in '85. Yes, that is a double entendre.

Finally, the keynote event of the weekend on Saturday evening was when classmates and spouses met for a family-style Italian dinner at Rigoletto's. Over the wine and food, we all shared some laughs at the memories and the good times we all had during our school days. Everyone is looking forward to our 50th in 2035.

BCom CLASS OF '90

By Mike House

In February 2010, I and four classmates, Heather Prentice, Michelle Turcotte, Don Herman, and Roberto Fazio decided that we were going to organize our reunion. Our 20th anniversary turned out to be a smashing success. We attracted people from Toronto, Calgary, and Edmonton out to our three planned events on the Friday, Saturday evening, and Sunday morning. On the whole, the weekend provided a great chance to reconnect with our friends and our long-lost residence roommates while also making new friends that we never got a chance to know during our days as undergraduate students. I encourage every 20th anniversary to get together – it was a fun, rewarding experience.

Representing some of our classmates at the Business School Open House and Brunch pictured below are: Shane Jaffer who is working for the Government of Alberta, International Development in the financial sector (Calgary); Roberto Fazio who works for Porsche Canada (Toronto); Michelle Turcotte who leads a team at ATB Financial (Edmonton); Tracey Heikel Remmer who works for Corus Entertainment in their publishing area (Toronto); Catherine (Ferguson) Heggerud who recently ran as a candidate for School Board Trustee candidate (Calgary); Dave Remmer who is an IT architect for Microsoft Canada (Toronto); Mike House who is Assistant Dean, Development at the Alberta School of Business (Edmonton); Carmen de Antoni who works as a Vice President for Lifemark Health in Toronto; Heather Prentice Schmidt who was expecting her second child this December (Edmonton); and Wayne Wright, who is a partner with an accounting firm in Vermillion and rodeo chuck wagon outrider during the summer.

22ND ANNUAL BAA DINNER | OIL AND TURMOIL: THE ROLE OF TECHNOLOGY, REGULATION AND COMMUNICATION IN THE ENERGY SECTOR.

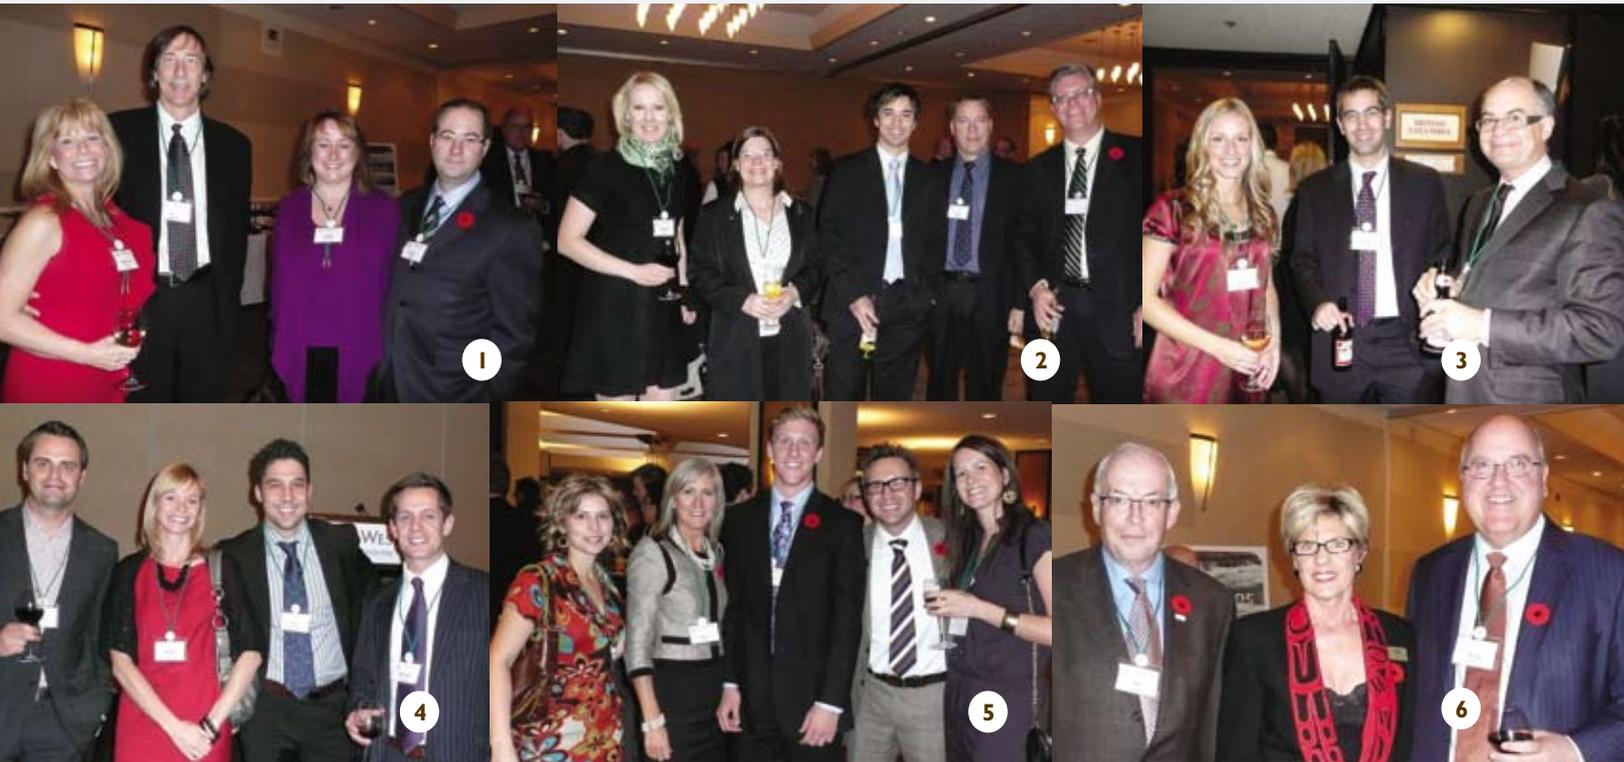

NOVEMBER 2

By Dustin Bateyko and Kimberly Murphy

The oil sands create jobs and business and government revenues, but what are the environmental ramifications? What is Alberta offering as an energy source? These questions are on the minds of all Albertans. Recently, the Globe and Mail published an article saying “After enduring a barrage of attacks that rehashed environmental hazards associated with developing Western Canada’s oil sands, Alberta’s provincial government has gone on the offensive.” The topic for this year’s dinner came out of a discussion amongst the committee who wanted to put forth a topic that was both relevant to Albertans and the business community.

Our featured speaker, Gerry Protti, has over 35 years of experience in the energy industry. To say he is involved in the industry would be an understatement. He is the Founding President of the Canadian Association of Petroleum Producers (CAPP) and the Executive Director of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada (IPAC).

Gerry offered a presentation that allowed the audience of 300 alumni and guests to understand both sides of the oil sands story, the benefits it brings to Albertans and the challenges with public opinion, both provincially and globally.

• • • MARC KENNEDY

THERE ARE SIGNATURE
DATES, MOMENTS, AND TIMES IN OUR
CANADIAN PSYCHE
THAT LIFT AND INSPIRE US.

The event was the 2010 Winter Olympic Games in Vancouver.

The day was Saturday, February 20, the end of a disappointing first week for Canada.

The national mood was mixed as the incessant rain was playing havoc with scheduling and incurring negative international coverage, and top results were slow to come in for the Canadian team.

And then came that most unassuming moment.

The moment was in the final end of a tense curling match between undefeated Team Canada, trailing by one, and their top rival, Great Britain.

Our very own Marc Kennedy, '05 BCom, was in the hack getting ready to throw.

And then it began quietly, an impromptu singing of the first few bars of the Canadian national anthem.

A broad smile would quickly cross Marc's face as he glanced up around him, perhaps looking for his 55 family members in the crowd of 5,000, but he quickly re-focused waiting for the relative silence of a curling rink to resume. But it didn't, the singing only grew louder, growing in momentum with each familiar phrase.

Unsure of what to do and out of respect for the anthem, Marc relaxed for a few moments and then simply took it in with the rest of his teammates. Things then almost went into slow motion as everyone including Marc's childhood hero, Wayne Gretzky, waited for the complete song to be sung.

"We just let it happen and then all the stress and tension seemed to leave. We were simply four kids realizing our dream."

From that moment on, Marc and the rest of Team Canada would not look back.

Team Canada Curling would go on to win that game without missing another shot and, ultimately, win the gold medal.

Team Canada would turn the page on what was a disappointing first week at the Winter Olympics to an "own the podium" second week.

It is being in a position to give back that was a focus in Marc's speech to alumni at this year's Reunion Weekend where Marc both received an Alumni Horizon Award as well as gave the keynote address at the Green and Gold Breakfast. Here, he spoke on how curling is really a metaphor for his life and the importance of having a strong work ethic, learning how to win, learning how to lose, giving your best, going the extra mile, and giving back.

U OF A PRESIDENT INDIRA SAMARASEKERA AND MARC KENNEDY, U OF A ALUMNI RECOGNITION AWARDS.

Marc was very humbled by the week and also noted that he really didn't have a lot of time to reflect it seems since fully embracing curling in his first year of university after being cut from the U of A football team, helping manage a sports store in Edmonton's Saville Centre while pursuing his business degree, and, in doing so, meeting curling legend and his future skip and work partner Kevin Martin. In addition to the sports store at the Saville Centre, Kevin and Marc are now also partners in an "M&M Meat" franchise.

In reflecting on his business education, Marc feels it has served him well, both on and off the ice, in helping him think critically, out of the box, and pursuing different points of view. His favourite course was "conflict resolution which taught me how to deal with conflict amongst friends, co-workers, and even my teammates. It was invaluable information for me. He also noted the School's respect for taking eager young minds and strongly encouraging them to give back and help people out."

Since coming back from the Olympics, Marc has enjoyed time with his expectant wife Nicole, daughter Aubrey, juggled countless interview requests and speaking engagements, and looked towards getting ready and psyched for the new curling season as the team to beat.

He has also made a continued priority of one of his favourite off-ice activities – feeding children at local schools through M&M barbecues - and sharing the Olympic ideal, one moment at a time.

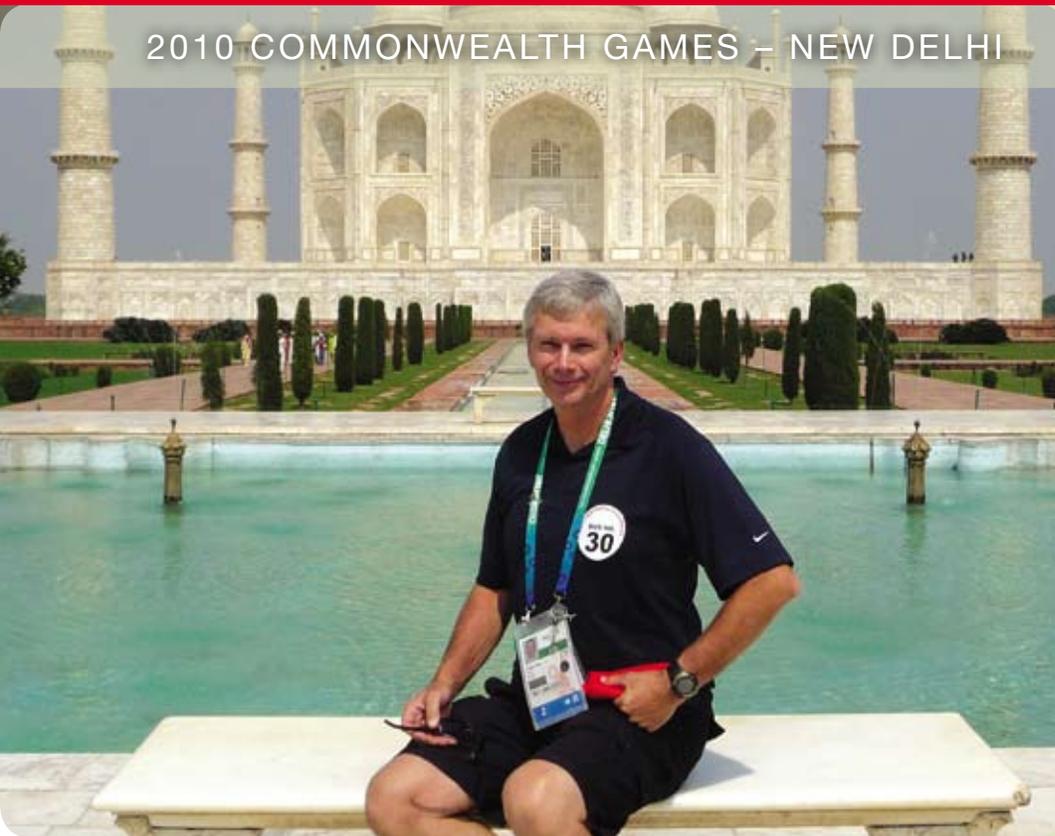

"The people I met at university - the professors and my classmates - certainly helped shaped me, and I hope these barbecues can also help shape these kids - feeding their souls so to speak."

AT THE END OF THE DAY, IT'S ALL ABOUT

STRENGTH OF OUR RELATIONSHIPS.

2010 COMMONWEALTH GAMES – NEW DELHI

WYNN PAYNE: OWNER KWIK KOPY DESIGN AND PRINT CENTRE

After receiving his Bachelor of Commerce degree in 1968, Wynn articulated for his Chartered Accountant designation. He spent time working for a large multinational corporation, followed by ten years as a VP finance for an Edmonton-based land development/property management company. In 1986, Wynn purchased a printing franchise that he has been operating since. Wynn is also a long term mentor in the School's MBA mentorship program.

WYNN PAYNE: CANADA'S OLDEST ATHLETE COMMONWEALTH GAMES

"In October of this year, I had the opportunity to compete in the Commonwealth Games at New Delhi, India, in Prone Rifle shooting.

It was a great thrill to be part of the Canadian team and wear the team colours while walking into the sixty thousand seat stadium for the opening ceremonies. The noise was like being at a Grey Cup and the cheering made for a winning touchdown. As a 64-year old, I feel very fortunate to compete in one of the few sports that age is not the most significant factor in performance. I've been shooting for a long time: winning my first Canadian championship at age 16. Although I have competed in seven world cups, this has been the fulfillment of a lifetime dream to be able to attend a major games.

The competition was very tight with many competitors from the world cup circuit. I was pleased with my ninth place finish out of the 40 something competitors. The winner had a 595 compared to my 590 (out of 600). I was in a shoot off for the eighth, ninth, and tenth positions and ended up finishing ahead of a person from India who had won four gold medals in other shooting disciplines at these games.

I enjoyed being able to make contact again with competitors and officials from other world shooting competitions. One was my friend from Australia who I have kept in constant contact with since 1978 when we were officials at the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton.

The whole Games experience was most interesting. Security was extremely high. The village resembled a prison except this was to keep people out versus keeping people in. The total parameter was an 8 foot wall with razor wire on top and gun towers every 100 metres. Everywhere you went was like going through airport security and the metal detection process. Every bus taking athletes to the respective venues had an armed car in front and rear with an armed soldier inside each bus.

We were told not to leave the village so touring was limited. The one major excursion was a day-long trip to the Taj Mahal and we did get a few trips into various parts of Delhi.

My schedule for 2011 is possibly a couple of world cups in the spring and for the team trials next August for the Pan-Am team that goes to Guadalajara, Mexico, in October 2011.

ALBERTA 2010: EXCELLENCE THROUGH ENGAGEMENT

Dean Mike Percy's tenth annual report to the community was again well attended by alumni and friends. Held at Enterprise Square on October 6, the event was emceed by Linda Banister, alumna and Business Advisory Council member. As is tradition, the event is also the launch for the Annual Report for which Linda shared:

"I encourage you to read the Annual Report that each of you received today. The Report not only provides interesting and informative information about the School, it showcases on a personal level many of the successes of its faculty, students, and alumni.

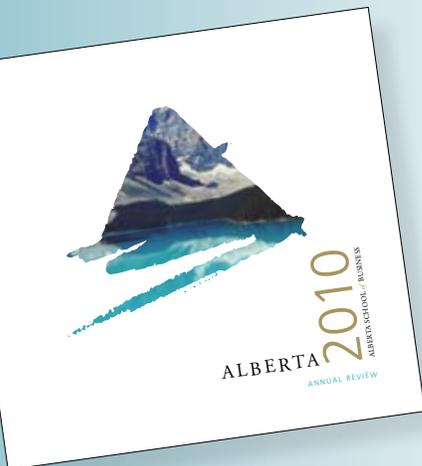

This year's report is a document that reinforces the beauty of our province and ties together the qualities of resourcefulness, knowledge, and engagement that are the pillars of excellence for both the Province and the School.

One of my favourite elements of the report is the evolution of the stylized A that was introduced in 2000 and used in conjunction with the official name change. Specifically, the A conveys the strength of learning and illustrates a striving to the top – to a higher business education and to new heights of excellence. The design so perfectly captures the essence of this outstanding School."

KARINA BIRCH:

Rocky Mountain Soap Company – About Us
www.rockymountainsoap.com

“We are an eclectic and passionate group of individuals (who at any given moment, might smell collectively like 23 different flavours of soap) living and working in Canmore, Alberta. Rocky is owned by Cam Baty and Karina Birch, a young couple who have nurtured the company from its days as a 300 - square foot shop in Canmore to the now eight stores and 7000 - square foot workshop. Cam and Karina balance running a rapidly growing company with raising two rapidly growing young girls.

We've got some of the best skiing, hiking, and biking in the world on our doorstep. We enjoy doing yoga in the workshop and playing hooky to go skiing. We enjoy going out for a run with our work buddies (in fact, we enjoyed going for a run so much that we hosted a Women's Run this April; it went over so well that we'll do it again next year. Why don't you join us? www.rmswomensrun.com.)

Being surrounded by the Canadian Rockies reminds us to live with awareness for our environment and for each other. Mindfulness has become our guiding principle, and we strive to remain grounded and reverent toward nature in all that we do.”

FROSH WEEK: BRINGING THE ENERGY

The 2010-2011 school year was brought in with lots of free give-aways, games, and events: and the energy is still flowing through the hallways! The BSA's Frosh Week was an incredibly jam-packed seven days as we launched our first ever Alberta School of Business Orientation, ran our Booksale, handed out free burgers with the help of the Business Alumni Association, showed the original "Wall Street" movie out in Business Quad, and taught our Cohort Olympic competitors the ASoB Cheers! To cap it all off, we took 100 new students out for our annual Frosh Retreat and taught them the basics of cases, conferences, student clubs, and team-bonding, before sending them forth into the new school year.

ALBERTA ENERGY CHALLENGE: TALKING ABOUT ALBERTA OIL

The Commerce Energy & Environment Group (CEEG) hosted the inaugural Alberta Energy Challenge on the third weekend of September. With immense alumni support judging the competition and being team ambassadors, the event went very smoothly. This four-day event brought together schools from across North America and had them compete in a "live" case competition. Students came together to address the issue of the American boycotts of Alberta oil and the need for new extraction technologies. This problem was presented by Title Sponsor Cenovus Energy and was very well received by the competitors. With this first year of competition behind them, CEEG and AEC hope to bring more attention to the Natural Resource, Energy and the Environment (NREE) major.

ALBERTA INTERNAL CASE COMPETITION

This year's competition was once again a smashing success with 15 junior and 13 senior level teams facing off in a day-long competition. With 21 industry, academic, and alumni judges, the teams presented a variety of interesting ideas to the panels, each hoping to claim top honours at our Annual event. Congratulations to the junior level winners Aaron Marchadour, Mark Mowbrey and Taryn Klymyk, and the first place senior team Kris Simard, Mark Neufeld, and Ena Cimic.

JDC WEST 2012: FUELING PRODUCTIVITY

The Alberta School of Business is excited to announce the return of JDC West, the largest student-run business case competition in Western Canada, to the University of Alberta in January 2012. This past August, co-chairs Nathan Petersen and Koryn Stamler presented a bid package with a focus on "Fueling Productivity". With the introduction of a brand-new "Educational Centre," the Co-chairs hope to educate students about the unique and innovative ways Alberta is combatting productivity. JDC West 2012 provides an unrivalled opportunity to demonstrate to a group of over 600 undergraduate students from 11 universities what our university, city, and province are doing to increase productivity. If your business is doing something exciting to increase productivity, they would love to hear about it. Please don't hesitate to send your story to External Co-chair Nathan Petersen at nathan@jdcwest.com.

MOVEMBER: 'STACHES FOR A GOOD CAUSE

• • • LISA HRYNIW

LEGEND HAS IT THAT
PHIDDIPIDES RAN 40
KILOMETRES FROM ATHENS
TO MARATHON 2500 YEARS
AGO TO ANNOUNCE
THE GREEK VICTORY
OVER PERSIA.

When MBA student Lisa Hryniw ran the same route in October for the Athens Marathon, she did it to raise money for the Arthritis Society as part of its Joints in Motion team.

Lisa was inspired by her daughter Maggie Ilcisin, five, who was diagnosed two years ago with juvenile idiopathic arthritis. Maggie has ongoing pain in her feet, elbows and, more recently, her hands.

To participate in Joints in Motion, Lisa had to raise $6,400, a figure she found daunting. But with the help of her friends, family, and the Alberta School of Business, she wound up with more than $18,000.

Among her most ardent supporters are fellow part-time MBA students Marian Gayed, Melissa Creech, and Joanne Pattison who work with her at the Alberta School of Business' Executive Education office. During the fall, the four decided to enter the Good to Great Case Study and Project Competition sponsored by Net Impact, an international student organization dedicated to making businesses more socially and environmentally responsible.

The competition was inspired by Jim Collins, author of Good to Great. The prize was the chance to learn to present and apply business management skills in the non-profit sector. The U of A team chose as its non-profit the Alberta-Northwest Territory Region of the Arthritis Society.

In October, the team was selected along with groups from Duke, Cornell, and Yale universities and the University of California at Berkeley.

“It’s exciting, Lisa says. Jim Collins is one of those great business minds that people look to for answers. The fact that he’s looking at our proposal and making comments is pretty valuable.”

The team’s goal is to help the Arthritis Society’s regional chapter to become more effective at delivering services and programs. Although only

Lisa has a vested interest in arthritis, her teammates jumped on board without hesitation. In fact, they were so excited about using their newly-honed skills in the non-profit arena that they decided even if they weren’t chosen, the project was so interesting they’d do it on their own.

“It’s something that can make a big difference in the lives of a lot of people, Lisa says. We’re all pretty passionate about not-for-profits.”

There’s no question Lisa is passionate about raising awareness about arthritis. She hadn’t run in years when she decided to participate in the marathon, and it was an ordeal. With 20 kilometres to go, she was hobbled by what turned out to be a tendon injury. It took six and a half hours for her to complete the course. By December, she still wasn’t able to run though she was hoping to. But she wouldn’t dream of comparing her pain to Maggie’s.

“I’m going to get better, but she can feel better for a few days or a few weeks and then it starts all over, Lisa says. For her, or for anybody who has arthritis, the psychological part is different. We’ve got to fund research so people can find a cure so Maggie and others won’t have to suffer with it anymore.”

NET IMPACT – ALUMNI WELCOME

Net Impact is an international organization dedicated to using the power of business to create a more socially and environmentally sustainable world. The U of A chapter is open to professionals, graduate students, and undergrads.

Speaking Events - In October, Cliff Mather the former CEO of Shell Canada gave a stirring presentation titled “The Business of Business is Business, So Who Cares About Social Responsibility?” and Mark Anielski, author of “The Economics of Happiness” discussed what really matters when it comes to sustainability.

Conferences - MBA students Mark Bensted, Loren Miller, and Alison Schneider attended the 18th Annual Net Impact Conference hosted by the University of Michigan October 28 - 30. The three day-conference entitled 2020: Vision for a Sustainable Decade had over 2500 attendees, representing 170 chapters, 129 schools, 14 countries, and featured 395 speakers.

Case Competitions – Given our third place finish last year, two teams have qualified to compete at the 2011 Leeds/Net Impact Case Competition at the University of Colorado at Boulder, and one team will be competing at the 2011 Rotman CSR Case Competition at the University of Toronto in February.

Greening Initiatives - The chapter has also taken the lead on key campus greening initiatives through an ongoing partnership with the University’s Office of Sustainability and consult on projects for the United Way and the REACH Council for Safe Communities.

MBA ORIENTATION

Orientation this year was a great success with uniformly positive reactions from the students. Part-time students participated in a weekend orientation highlighted by a presentation by recent grad Glenn Bosch (MBA '10) on his experiences as a part-time MBA and a wine a cheese mixer where new part-time students were able to meet each other and some returning part-time students.

Full-time students participated in a week-long orientation consisting of Leadership (SMO 652) with Dr. Richard Field in the mornings and orientation events in the afternoons. ALBERTA'S 50 MOST INFLUENTIAL PEOPLE OF 2010

named by Alberta Venture Magazine

'80 Brian Ferguson, BCom, of Calgary, Alberta, accepted a new responsibility as President and Chief Executive Officer running the newly spun-off Cenovus Energy Inc. in Calgary. Encana's Board of Directors voted to split into two, a natural gas company (Encana) and an integrated oil company (Cenovus). Over the next few years, Brian's new role will be to focus Cenovus on oil sands and will be selling off $500 million worth of natural gas assets. (PHOTO: Alberta Venture Magazine)

'77 Jim Prentice, BCom, of Calgary, Alberta, is a strong and effective leader who always keeps his cool. During his time as Canada's Environment Minister, fingers from international critics pointed to him when it came to issues surrounding Alberta's thriving yet controversial oil sands. He also told the world during last November's Copenhagen Conference on Climate Change that Canada won't back down when it comes to fighting globally green agreements that could choke the country's economy while other major polluters like China and India go free. Jim Prentice resigned as Member of Parliament in November 2010. (PHOTO by John Gaucher)

'81 Brian Vaasjo, MBA, and Don Lowry, of Edmonton, Alberta, were both named amongst the top 50 influential people in Alberta. It has been close to a year since Capital Power split from EPCOR Utilities into a publicly-traded separate company, a controversial move for Edmonton's city-owned utility. Under Brian's leadership as Capital Power's Chief Executive Officer, the publicly-owned company has forged a separate identity and demonstrated strong financial results. From an employee's standpoint, we're driving towards our own culture and our own direction, said Brian. We're going from somewhat of a utility environment to being a power-producer. Chief Executive Officer Don Lowry and his EPCOR Utilities also saw a sharp rise in its first-quarter profits. It happened so quickly and so fast, but it happened to be one of those things that turned out to be a great success for Edmonton, Don said about the split.
