Health, Menstruation, and Sexuality:
The Christian Tradition and Contemporary Realities

Doris Kieser, PhD

Associate Professor of Theology, St. Joseph's College and Associate Adjunct Professor, John Dossetor Health Ethics Centre, University of Alberta

Friday, 9 December

12:00 - 13:00 MST/MDT

Alberta Health Services Site Administration Offices
(1J2.13 WMC) University of Alberta Hospital

In the course of Judeo-Christian history, menstruation has been linked to notions of purity. Some perceptions of purity and menstruation have had an impact on the sexual health of females. This presentation will explore some of the history and evolution of notions of purity in relation to menstruation, and will consider some contemporary ethical thought on the place of menstruation and purity in female sexuality and health.
