

Dr. Deborah McGregor is Anishinaabe from Whitefish River First Nation. A Canada Research Chair in Indigenous Environmental Justice, Dr. McGregor integrates Indigenous knowledge in her work, advancing towards a model of planetary well-being that emphasizes a relationship between our planet's and people's health. Bringing the voices of Indigenous peoples to invoke change, she coordinated Canada's first Indigenous Environmental Justice Symposium in 2016. Dr. McGregor is changing the course of climate change research with humility, instilling a sense of hope for the future.
