

Overview

Staff consists of full-time and part-time faculty physicians, a nurse practitioner, registered nurses and full-time assistants who provide primary health care to patients within the Northeast area of Edmonton. In addition to common patient presentations, the family health clinic aims to support population groups who have specific barriers to accessing and/or utilizing health services such as:

- Low income families, especially those with young children
- Youth who may be uncomfortable seeking health from mainstream health professionals
- Aboriginal populations
- People with high risk lifestyles, including addictions
- People with significant mental health concerns and social barriers
- Socially and medically complex patients
- Geriatrics with multiple issues (frail elderly)

Learning Opportunities

Residents can access various services at the NECHC for horizontal half-days:

- Weekly morning seminars
- Practice simulated office oral (SOO) workshops
- Practice quality improvement projects
- Work as part of a multi-disciplinary team
- A diverse and challenging patient population
- Multiple services that can be consulted in person
- A great continual learning environment
- Dedicated physicians
- A great place to work

Ongoing research participation opportunities include:

- Case-based paper on harm reduction practice
- Evidence based medicine
- Health care costs
- Plus, a host of others or, if you are keen, you can start your own research project

Preceptors

Dr. Debora Corby

Clinical Lecturer, Clinical Preceptor

Dr. Shakibeh Edani

Clinical Preceptor

Dr. Christina Korownyk

Assistant Professor, Clinical Preceptor

Dr. Marco Mannarino

Site Director, Clinical Preceptor

Dr. David Ross

Associate Professor, Assistant Program Director

Dr. Robert Turner

Clinical Preceptor