

Overview

The Boyle McCauley Health Centre is Edmonton's only inner-city Community Health Centre. Our multidisciplinary team focuses exclusively on the inner-city population, and we provide full range of care from prenatal through palliative, with the exception of intrapartum care. We work closely with community and health partners and social agencies to address the broad range of health-related issues, with priority to social determinants of health.

Learning Opportunities

- Learn about addiction treatment embedded in holistic primary care for an inner-city population
- Learn about robust mental health services with a focus on trauma-informed care: integrated psychiatry rotation with on-site psychiatrists and psychologists
- Develop skills in addressing the special issues of inner-city Indigenous people
- Witness the treatment of complex chronic pain and suffering in an at-risk population
- Participate in on-site visits from specialists (Infectious diseases, palliative care)
- Garner off-site service experience: men's and women's shelters, Edmonton Native Healing Centre, iHuman (inner city youth)
- Perform multiple minor procedures: wound care clinic, sutures/I&D, minor surgical, IUDs, casts and splints
- Teach medical students, and participate in the development of inner-city curriculum

Preceptors

Dr. Cameron Barr

Dr. Tally Mogus

Dr. Craig Bulawka

Dr. Francesco Mosaico

Dr. Nancy Easton

Dr. Mat Rose

Dr. Jessica Kirkwood

Dr. Niran Vijayaratham

Dr. Bailey SoroChan

Dr. Sara Axford